Governor Edwin S. Stuart, who has made an excellent official, will soon retire from office and will be succeeded by John K. Tener, whose former acts have been severely criticised. All will hope that he will so conduct himself in the high office which he will shortly assume as to win praise from those who were his opponents. A man may take a false step but experience should be his future guide to prevent another. He will have opportunity to display courage and patriotism in safeguarding the interests of the people and the wish is that he will maintain the high standard of his predecessor.
