would from this statement appear he under-If this is the conclusion of result of the gentleman's examination of my masterly producbetter look again, and at least wait until the offusions of his brains have at least in some man that I utterly disclaim any attempt to in-jure the glorious and Gody cause of Temperman that I utterly disclaim any attempt to inance. Neither can any man justify this con-clusion from my dominum cation. My object have my first they will ever was and still is to show the absurdity, impro-priety and ingenerous effects of attempting to carry into execution such an unrighteous and tyrannical Law. I have not said one word in cense Law. I dislike both old and new, but keepers, his tender wife, his virtuous and innocense Law, I dishke both old and new, but cent daughters, and then ask yourself can I of two evils I should try to choose the least. add another pang to their afflicted hearts can But in full view of all the gentleman has said add another pang to their afflicted hearts can But in full view of all the gentleman has said in favor of the new Law, I still think it to be the most odious of the two. I therefore choose the old Law. You may if you think proper set it down as a fact that I am not well informed. Indeed I know full well my knowledge is limited. But I suppose my opponent must be well informed at least in his own opinion or he could not so readily judge of others. However, if his remarks on my communication are a specimen of his knowledge and wisdom, I should be inclined to think he is deceived in himself for if I can see right he has spent the main of his labor, in writing against me to no purpose at am as much in favor of Temperance as my opponent can be, at any rate I should be very sorry to injure the cause as much as I think he has done.

My Temperance friend is so straight up that I think he leans a little over, he wishes to measure every man's head by his own, and his head is full of Temperance, full of Democracy, full of tyranny, and full of wisdom, and what is very strange, it is no more than full at last.

It seems he is bent to drive the people into his Temperance measures whether they will or not. Now I do most silemily and sincerely invite all my Temperanca friends to stop for a moment and review and compare the course they have been and are yet pursuing. Can it be possible that men of intelligence and sobriety will ever permit themselves to be hoodwinked into a compliance with such an unreasonable and unjust Law. What I a free man, a temperate man, a wise man, and a good man, in a free Country, where tyranny dards not show his head, deprived of the use of wine, of coider, and of alc-yes and even small beer, for any thing that will fomest has spirit in it. Fadjure you by all that is sacred to desist

if you are a friend to Temperance, for such measures as the carrying out this Law must ruin the cause you are laboring to support .-If you think to drive the people you will find to your cost their face turned the other way. My heart way and my Temperance friend de My heart of used persuation; they were dollared good, their labors are blest of God. But alas! how is it now. It is becoming party question the people's nource of the resemble with party divisions, and the resemble bitterness, contention, and strife. A

But I must turn my attention more the arguments of me statements. For it is a well established fact

It was a tradition in times past when any If you inquired of them why they done so and come out in support of Temperance, one of the one committed a wrong, to lay it to the Devil. so, they would say to you the Devil made them.
Thus they make a kind of scare goat of the Devil to get rid of their sins. But at the prewill live in every human heart, I will inform Armes William 3 Devil to get rid of their sing. But at the present time if there is any thing wrong any evil or sin committed, why of course it is all laid to rum or strong drink. A man that don't drink can't do wrong, or at least they would have us to think so. I would ask how it happens that Christ and his apostles did not use the same or similar language for the abuse of strong drink? Was there as very good reason: they knew where the sin or evil lay, and they was not slow to reprove it. "James says when lust had conceived it brought forth sin." Paul says the hearts of men's are deceifed addesperated beauty. A cause that must and Ariold Henry S. Asborn Mitton Asborn Mitton Armes William 3 Ariold Henry S. Armes William 3 says the hearts of meet are deceifful and the perstely wicked above all things," and that honest reader. And to carry out and perfect there is none righteous no not one.
