The Misseuri Compressive We have frequently been asked, to explain what is meant by the "Missouri Compromise," and to give its origin; and as this is a matter which is now much salked of, and will continue to be alluded to in the political discussions for the next year we will comply with these requests as far as we are able.

In 1819, the territory of Missouri applied to Congress for admission into the Union as a And The Control of the Prince of the Control of the State. Slavery existed there then and had ex-it was before. Slavery is not established Having made his purchases for Cash, he will Flannet, Socks, Butter, Cheese, Lard, Grain of there, by the Missouri compromise, as some be able to sell at such rates as cannot fail to all kinds, Beexwax, Tallow, also Cash, and a have supposed, but it is permitted, if the inhabitants there desire it, there, being no law to prevent it. Such we suppose to be the general understanding of the matter. - N.H. Patriot.

The Successful Farmer.

To be a successful farmer, science is not very necessary. A man may be a good farmer, without being a naturalist, botanist, or chemist, which might enable him to analyze the different soils on his farm. But the more knowledge the possesses on the subject of Agriculture, the better. Intelligence in what relates to his business, is quite as useful to the farmer as it is to the merchant or manufacturer, in what relates to their pursuits.

A saccessful agriculturalist must be an intelligent men; he must be distinguished for careful and accurate observation. And altho' I would not encourage, generally, experiments in the common pursuits of husbandry; yet the skillful and judicious farmer should regard all his operations, in some sense, as experimental. his operations, in some sense, as experimental paironage we save necessions received in our Altho' not undertaken as such, he will regard line of business, and would inform them that we COD writing paper at 12½ cts. and letter have made of behaviors in his nursuit and bave fitted up a new and enabling him better to judge in what way he can cultivate his farm to the best profit.

In this way, he will not only learn the capabilities of his own farm, and its adaptation to west of M. S. Wilson's Store, and opposite I particular crops; but he will be constantly improving his knowledge of agriculture generally without engaging in hazardous experiments. he will occasionally change or mounty me and of culture, so far as the light of his own expenses, or that of others, may seem to justify.

| Copperation of the property of th he will occasionally change or modify his mode of improving agriculture. But what could one such farm accomplish, when every well cultivated farm should, in a degree, be an experimental one? An intelligent farmer will become wiser in his business every year, as he will be increasing his knowledge and improving his increasing his knowledge and improving his judgement from his own operations and obser

There is another requisite of a good farmer. He must be a man of calculation—of calculation in respect to profit, present and prospective. Like the merchant and manufacturer, his object will be the greatest return for his capital and labor. And he will not look at present profit only; as he will regard the improvement profit only; as he will regard the improvement purchasing a certain Note drawn by the subscriber to this farm as so much addition to his capital. He will steadily keep these two objects in view, of getting, the greatest annual return from his estate, and of improving its condition, whereby its value may be increased. A man of calculation will learn by experience whether.

The second of calculation will learn by experience whether his farm is to large or to small for profit; what crops make the best return for the laber expended upon them; whether it will do to purchase manure, or prepare composts or striking manures, and whether he can afford to hire labor or not, and at what price. Calculation and a careful estimate of the sent sed value of his crops, will enable him to deside all these questions.

Whatever the castal of the farmer is the man of calculations will endeavor to make the man of calculations will endeavor to make the productive.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15, 1847.

To the Editors of the Daily Atlas:

DEAR Sin:—Perhaps you have noticed in some of the New York papers, a statement concorning the remarkable powers of a Mathematician in that city, who adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides, and performs all other arithmetical calculations, with a rapidity that seems almost mirraculous, As I am that person, I will endeavor to give a correct statement of the facts which I hope you will publish. First: Let a column of figures, say 3000 m length and 10 or 20 in breadth be placed before me, and in less than five seconds of time I will give the sum total, always commencing on the left hand side to write the answer down. It matters not what length the column is or what breadth. I will give the sum total as fast as the figures can be written down. Second as fast as the figures can be written down.
