the appointment of a select committee of five to inquire into the cause of the rencontre. Mr. Stephens, of Georgia, copposed this, and spoke of the fact, that an amicable adjustment of the difficulty had been made by the gentlemen, and that they had apologized to the House. He could not see the good to grow out of a committee to revive any impleasant feelings. Mr. Haralson and Mr. Jones again publicly expressed their regrets, and in taken of their amicable feelings, shook hands. Some members still contended that the dignity of the House required a full investigation into the whole matter, with a view to censure or expulsion.

After considerable debate, Mr. Stephens offixed a substitute for Mr. Thompson's resolutim, to the effect that the apologies of the two Jarral, which was adopted.
