Yes, sing the STARS, and sing the STRIPES! From Maine to Georgia sing! God's battle ungels o'er them spread The guardian plume and wing! Behold! the Spirits of the Past Who died for them, are on the blast! Bid, bid their folds like tempests fly! Swear, swear their Nation shall not die!

THERE'S A LAND OF GLOWING BEAUTY.

There's a land of glowing beauty, Cloudless skies, seren'e and fair, Where no stormy wind e'er bloweth, Where the mind is free from care.

Just beyond the darksome river Lies this land of joy and light; Saints and angels dwell within it

Songs and praises their delight.

O'er its verdant plains of pleasure Streams of joy forever flow; Peaceful rivers gently gliding, Murmur music soft and low.

Fragrant flowers to deck its nathways Streets of burnished shining gold, Pearly gates and walls of jasper, Spiendors that can ne'er be told.

Bowers of amaranthine spleudor, Fruits of fair amirrosial taste, Verdant hills and fertile valleys; Landscapes ne'er by sin defaced.

'Tis the land that God has promised, Heavenly Canaan, land of rest; Where for ever in his presence

TO MY FRIEND.

When years have wrought their changes Upon the human heart— When life's bright hopes have vanished, And early friends depart. When thou art sad or lonely, And would some voice attend, O, think that mine for one will say,

"Truly I am thy friend." When Time has parted us on earth, And years have taken flight, Let's not forget our friendship here, Let us oft think of how we met, Our voices raised in prayer; And let our lives be pure on earth, That we may meet Him there.

We've shared each others griefs and joys  We know each others heart, But years will make great changes For we will have to part. Yet let our friendship e'er be true, While earth-life here is given, And if we live as God requires, We'll meet again in Heaven.
