THE ASSASSINATION LONG AGO PLAN-NED .- Mr. A. D. Richardson states in his forthcoming work:

On the day of Mr. Lincoln's first inauguration, I travelled in a crowded railway car in Mississippi and Louisiana. While the train was stopping, and conversation could be heard through the carriage, some one alluded to the event Another passenger replied: "I hope to God he will be killed before he takes the oath." A third said: "I have wagered a new hat that neither he nor Hamlin will ever live to be inaugurated." Nearly all present belonged to the educated, wealthy slaveholding class—the class which originated and conducted the war. Several expressed approval of these remarks, not one uttered a word of dissent.

I was in the Cotton States for weeks after this, and the subject was frequently alluded to in my presence. I heard but one man condemn the proposed assassination, and he journals, which were called reputable, asked, "Is there no Brutus to rid the world of this tyrant?" Rewards were openly propoand for the President's head. If Mr. Ling

Speech of the Secretary of War. Colonel Sherman, to-day, presented to the War Department fifty one colors' captured by the cavalry portion of Major General Sherian's command at Dinwiddie Court House. Five Forks, and several cavalry engagement's from Sutherland Station, along the Appomattox to Tabernacle Church, as well as at engagements at Jettersville, Sailor's Creek and Appomattox Court House, where the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia sur-

Brevet Major H. W. Farrar, A. D. C. to Major General Wright, commanding the 6th Corps, presented nineteen rebel flags and two guidons, captured by that corps.

First Lieutenant G. W. Ford, 88th New

York Volunteers, presented fifteen flags captured by the 2d Corps, commanded by Majo General Humphreys.

Colonel Sherman says: These flags were taken in a series of engagement, commencing 15.
