The official returns of the late election in Virginia indicate the election of thirty Conservatives and sixty Radicals. Eighteen of the latter are colored men. A protest against counting the votes polled in Richmond after Wednesday morning has been fi'ed with General Schofield.

WHO WILL YIELD?-The people have willed, through their representatives in Congress assembled, that the lately revolted States can only regain their position as participants in the Government, under certain requirements and guarantees. In all this, there is nothing designed to degrade any citizen in the South. Just punishment is not degradation - it rather tends to clevate. This is what the people who were loval to the Government desire to effect for the traitors of the South. They mean to punish, then elevate to citizenship and make loyal all who were disloyal. But just here, Andrew Johnson differs with Congress. He asserts that Congress has no right to punish a man after he has been guilty of treason. James Buchanan declared, when the traitors were preparing to precipitate rebellion, he had no right to coerce a rebel. The people re solved otherwise; they crushed rebellion; now, through their representatives, the people demand that in some way rebels be made so odicus as to preclude the possibility of its recurrence. Congress has fixed the odium and provided the way to apply the by Andrew Johnson were nevertheless constitutionally passed, and are now as forcibly the laws of the land as if the President-hadnever vetoed them. But he has refused to enforce the will of the people. By every means within his power, the President has the land. Congress will of course notice this failure of duty. The people demand like alacrity from all their servants. They do not care for Andrew Johnson's opinions and preferences in the matter of reconstruction. He can only recommend, but in remains for Congress to say what shall be done. That body has declared the basis of reconstruction. The people have endorsed it, and it now remains to be seen who will yield When Congress assembles, the first question will be, Why were not the laws of the land enforced? Why did the executive officer at the head of the nation fail in his duty? vember next, be set apart and observed The President is sworn into office by direcrection of Congress, and that body is the authority whose duty it is to see that he is

"A newspaper is read by hundreds who never see the attractive bills which are posted in the taverns and the store rooms. Every subscriber to a county paper reads all our forests. He has permitted us to multiply of conversation when friends meet, and arrangements are made for attending sales. The result is a large crowd, spirited bidding, and a realization of ten, twenty or fifty times what it cost to advertise. No money is so a single article will pay all it costs to advertise a sale of personal property in a newspaper. Is it not strange then, that any one should fail to advertise?
