PASSENGER CAR SWEPT OFF -- A passecrer and an employee of the Baltimore American gives the following thrilling account of a street car in the flood :

The car had come down Gay street nearly to the bridge, when an alarm was raised both in the car and by persons on the street, warn. quart. ing the conductor of the danger of proceeding further. A check was made in the speed of the car, and it finally stopped, but only for a moment, when the conductor of the car concluded to run the risk, and proceeded onward. My friend (Mr. E. Aymeriche), a Spanish gentleman from Manzanillo de Cuba, elry, &c. See advertisement. and myself (U J. Emery) endeavored to get out of the car, but did not succeed in the attempt, as the rear of the car and platform was blocked up at the time with persons; some of whom afterwards succeeded in jumping from the car. The car proceeded near, ly to the head of Harrison street, when it became too heavy by the weight of water pressing against it to proceed further. It was at this time that both the conductor and driver unfastoned the horses from the car, and getting on their backs, went on shore, leaving those in the car to save themselves as best they might. One horse could have save every person on the car, but no such succor reached us. The car soon floated, and was swiftly moved by the tremendous current in every direction. There was then about taken with cramp. eight persons on the ear, the others having either side, four or five of them managed at great risk to clutch the awning, and were saved by emering the second story window.

My friend and myself stood with our feet on the brakes of the car, holding on to the top has been extended to the first of January our armpits, and the car continued swaying in the wild torrent from one side to the oth er, we laboring hard to clear ourselves from
