The Republican members of Congress at an early day of the present session beld s meeting for the purpose, if possible, of settling upon some financial theory which would be of the most practical benefit to the country, and discussing those bills which had already been presented to the Senate, but the caucus adjourned without arriving at any conclusion or determining upon any one of the many theories advanced. It is now thought that the subject will go over to the next Congress.

A letter from General Sheridan to General Sherman announces the substantial close of the Indian war. The hostile Indians have been driven onto the Staked Plain, where there is no small game or buffaloes, and are now ready to make submission, and to submit to the terms dictated. General Sheridan puts an end to the story that Black Kettle's band were peaceable Indians, and on their reservations at the time they were attacked by our troops. He says they were one hundred miles from the reservation, and in the camp were found, besides the spoil taken from the scene of the outrages on the Soloman and Saline rivers, their own illustrated history, showing the fights, murders, attacks on trains, and robberies in which the band had been engaged.

A Washington correspondent says:-The confession of Atzeroit, one of the Booth conspirators, executed at Washington for the assassination of President Lincoln, has just, for the first time, been given to the public through the columns of a Baltimore paper. It has heretofore been withheld in the furtherance of public justice, until the last case in connection with the assassination had been disposed of.

The document does not make any very important disclosures. It was written by Atzerodt in the jail the night previous to his execution, and carries evidences of a considerable degree of mental excitement. It says that the original scheme was simply to abduct Mr. Lincoln, and only so far did his complicity extend. It was not until about three hours before the assessination that murder was broached as a part of the plan, and that when he was informed that Harold and himsef bad
