Of the original one hundred and six of the Lord of Hosts, members of the Commune two paly survive and only two fell in battle, the remainder eather being shot by the Government, or killed in the quarrels among themselves. The situation in Paris is horrible. A Cable disspatch says that an unbearable odor prevails. in the streets, arising from thousands ofcorps. os lying in every direction in various stages of decomposition. The smell is fearful, and an epidemic is apprehended if immediate sanitary measures are not taken for removed the first beavy rain will wash it away, and that some parts of the city are wholly uninhabitable, by reason of the stouch arising from those decaying charnel heaps, and that the wholesale executions of the insurgents continues. All, without exception, are shot immediately on being captured. The follow. , ing dispatch was received by Scoretary Fish from Minister Washburne;
