On Friday evening the Hall was crowded uncomfortably, and we learn the receipts fully met the expectations of all concerned. Such groups of fair daughters of Eve, as had a knowledge of the relations of living disease is found in the vague notion that, charge of the tables, would have made any entertainment entertaining; indeed only basis for a true medical science and everything was highly creditable. The cheerful music was a delightful adcop. tandum.

Tuesday last appeared to be a general "flit-day"-the most general one within the recollection of our "oldest inhabitant," who says Market street was a densely crowded avenue of beds, tables, pots, pans, &c., from early more until nightfall; we know we were industriously in the "mix" ourselves, and, if it be true that "three flits are equal to a fire," the Lord preserve us from the third-Tuesday was our second.

Cor One of Dr. Landis' driving horses got loose a few nights since, and in walking around, broke through the floor of Dr. Hinkle's ice house and fell a distance of twelve or fifteen feet-the house not having been filled this winter-without being in the least injured. "BREAKING LAWS," To the Editor of "The Mariettian "

Under the above caption I find, in your issue of last week, over the signature of "A. B. G.," which I interpret, Rev. A. B. Grosh, an article which opens with an "When Dr. Trall, in his lectures last

Now I regard the doctrine that a law of nature cannot be violated nor broken as an important practical truth, when recognition lies at the very foundation of and dead matter, and as affording the a successful Healing Art. Those of your readers who heard me will recollect that I discussed this subject purely as a philosophical problem, and the application which I then made of the theory which I advocated, as A. B. G. must remember, was a relutation of the doctrines entertained by medical men, that vature had provided remedies for diseases, and a law of cure." I argued that nature had provided no remedies for diseases whatever; that there was no law of cure in all the universe, and that the only condition of recovery was obedience to phisilogical law.

Nor can I see how the error of the witness I will call to the stand is A. B. G. himself. Ten lines on from his openmedical profession, and this almost uniing paragraph he says :

"Of course, no one uses the words 'break,' 'transgress,' 'violate,' or their equivolents, when applied to the commands of God, in the sense of 'abrogate, 'unnu.', 'nullify', or 'repeal'.

Precisely so, Mr. A. B. G., this is a matter "of course," then why that "but," which buts the objection to the philosophical truth, in the third sentence of your article ? If you are only contending for the propriety of the ordinary expressions, why suggest a "but," as to

To the above an old and valued friend of ours adds ---- Editor. As Corporal Martin has given you all the news and gossin of Camp Drayton. I will not re-hash it, but simply permit me to say I was glad to greet the new recruits from Columbia, Marietta and vicinity; that a copy of The Mariettian occasionally finds me which revives thoughts of "auld lang syne;" that the return of Col. Welsh at Otter Island brought out such enthusiasm as is rarely found, so deeply rooted is every soldier's heart for him and his safety. The apthe system, thus adopting the figurative | pearance of The Mariettian revives a talk of and about home, and if some correct the error by refering back to first Home Guard Mariettian could steal along the camps some evening, unobserved, he would feel proud in hearing the expressions and seeing some of the best soldiers in the Regiment are from his own town; and when led on to battle by our brave and worthy Tom, you will have no occasion to blush for their conduct. Our friend goes on to say something about a chair in O. S. Samuel Haines' possession, which we could not rightly decypher. We hope he will write again. Jacob S. Roath, of Maytown, our commissary sergeant, sends his remembrances to you and his friends. Our Regiment is now at four different points : Hilton Head Island, Graham's Plantation, Braddock's Point and Seabrook Landing. Our friend speaks of Augustus Wagoner, who was wounded with Capt. Rambo, as not likely to recover from his wounds ; he says he once lived with Dr. N. Watson, of Donegal!
