

The Mariettian.

MARIETTA, PA.

SATURDAY, JULY 25, 1863.

FALL OF PORT HUDSON.—On the eve, night of the 7th General Gardner sent out a flag of truce; he had heard of the capitulation of Vicksburg, and desired General Banks to give him such information as he might have concerning the truth or falsity of the rumor. General Banks sent him a copy of Gen. Grant's dispatch, giving the full particulars of the capitulation of Vicksburg. General Gardner then expressed his willingness to surrender upon the same terms. General Banks declined, and announced that he would accept nothing short of an unconditional surrender. On the next morning he unconditionally surrendered.

The garrison consisted of six thousand effective men, in excellent condition.—There were sixty pieces of artillery in the various batteries along the river and in the rear, many of them of very large calibre. The magazine contained an abundant supply of powder, but a small quantity of shot and shell. This deficiency accounts for the rebel firing having been so slack during the last two or three days' siege. Gen. Gardner was evidently husbanding his resources to repel an anticipated assault, and had an abundant supply to work all guns for several days continuously without entirely exhausting his supplies.

There was no beef in possession of the rebels at the time of the surrender. The flesh of mules had been dealt out for some time—short rations—to supply the want of beef. There were quite a number of mules inside the rebel works, and an abundance of corn, sufficient to have lasted the garrison a week longer, if they had had the heart to fight.

General Gardner is reported to have said after the surrender, that he expected General Grant with his army would come down from Vicksburg and assume the conduct of the siege, and in that event his works would be assaulted and overpowered by superior numbers, and many of his men would be bayoneted in the trenches before a surrender could be made.

The sudden conversion of Hon. Albert Gallatin Brown to Unionism is regarded as one of the marvels of a better change in the rebellion. Mr. Brown was once United States Senator from Mississippi, but more recently a member of the rebel Congress. This Mississippi politician, under the old regime, was one of the most violent and coarse assailers of everything Northern, and was fiercely devoted to slavery. He opposed Buchanan for being too much of a Northern man, and came very near overthrowing Jeff Davis in Mississippi, because the latter defended Buchanan. It is surprising that he came and surrendered to Grant, utterly disavowing any belief in Secession, declaring that he was always opposed to it, and finally taking the oath of allegiance.

Gen. Gabriel Reno Paul, a skillful and gallant officer, who was erroneously reported killed at Gettysburg during the first day's fight, is now lying in that village severely wounded. A round ball, evidently from a hunting rifle, in the hands of a sharpshooter, penetrated the right side of his head, near the temple, and passing near the brain, severed the optic nerve, and passed out through the left eye. The wound is an ugly and dangerous one; but the physicians not only look for a recovery, but hope to restore the sight of one or both eyes.

Hon. Wm. Whiting, Solicitor of the War Department, will leave in Wednesday's steamer as an accredited agent of the United States to the Courts of Europe, and commissioned legal adviser of our Ministers in England and France in reference to matters of great importance. A fleet of powerful iron steamers is now being fitted out at Buttonwood in Great Britain, which are supposed to be intended for the rebel navy. The visit of Mr. Whiting has probably a direct reference to this fact.

A remarkable work was accomplished at Worcester, Mass., a short time ago. The chimney stack at the iron works of Nathan Washburn, which is 100 feet high, having in it 60,000 bricks and weighing 170 tons, was moved a distance of 150 feet and turned partly around, without the slightest accident, and not even a brick was dislocated.

The Prince of Wales has a natural child, two years and a half old, son of the daughter of a gatekeeper of Windsor Castle, upon which he has settled a pension of one thousand dollars a year for life; so says the Boston Post.

Godey's Lady Book for August is out and on our desk. The fashion plate contains six figures—six patterns new styles head dresses, Spanish Mantilla, &c. A rich number for the sex.

Surgeon General Hammond, of the United States army, upon questionable authority, reports the following casualties of General Lee's army at Gettysburg: Left behind, 11,000 wounded, 8,000 wounded taken away by him, 4,500 buried by the Federals, and 17,000 taken prisoners; captured at Falling Waters, of General Pettigrew's command, 1,000 prisoners and 4,000 killed and wounded—making an aggregate of 42,500. Gen. Hammond reports further that only six rebel surgeons were left behind at Gettysburg, and, with one or two exceptions, manifested the utmost indifference as to the condition of their wounded, nor did they leave any medical stores on the field. This fact should be contrasted with the battle at Chancellorsville, where Lee received medical stores and surgeons from the Federals, who took good care of their wounded.

John Burns, over 70 years of age, a resident of Gettysburg, fought throughout the battle of the first day, and was wounded no less than five times—the last shot taking effect in his ankle, wounding him severely. He came up to Col. Wister, in the thickest of the fight, shook hands with him, and said he came to help. He was dressed in his best, consisting of a light blue swallow-tailed coat, with brass buttons, corduroy pantaloons, and a stove pipe hat of considerable height, all of ancient pattern, and doubtless an heirloom in his house. He was armed with a regulation musket. He loaded and fired unflinchingly until the last of his five wounds brought him down. He will recover. His little cottage was burned by the rebels. A purse of one hundred dollars has been sent to him from Germantown. Brave John Burns.

The father of Gen. Grant, living at Covington, Ky., was lately serenaded by a large deputation from Cincinnati. The wife of the General received the same compliment on Tuesday. General Strong, acknowledging this tribute for Mrs. Grant, desired, in her behalf, that the gallant soldiers of the army should be remembered with gratitude. "Mrs. Grant is now on the way to join her husband, who, since the commencement of the war, has not asked for one day's absence. He has not found time to be sick. With these remarks, she bids you good night, and begs you to accept her thousand thanks."

Morgan made an unsuccessful attempt to cross the Ohio river near Cooleyville, but was prevented by a gunboat. One hundred and fifty rebels were killed and drowned, and a thousand prisoners were taken, with their artillery. Among the prisoners were Col. Ward and Col. Dick Morgan, a brother of John. The rest of the band scattered among the hills.

Both the sons of Hon. Edward Everett were drafted in Boston. One of them has just returned to this country from England, having recently graduated at Cambridge University. Both of them, it is said, have made up their minds to serve in person, instead of procuring substitutes or paying the three hundred dollars exemption fee.

It is stated in the New Orleans Era of the 12th instant, that the Gen. Gardner who surrendered Port Hudson, is a deserter from the United States army. He held a commission when the war broke out, and did not wait to resign it before he entered the rebel service.

Lieut. E. L. Sproat writes to Governor Ramsey that, out of the 1st Minnesota regiment, less than one hundred men are left. Colonel Colville, together with the lieutenant colonel, major, and a majority of captains and lieutenants, are killed or wounded.

John Morgan, as is well known, says the Cincinnati Commercial, does not carry the leading article of "brains" in his command. That article is under the hat of Col. Basil Duke, who is Morgan's adviser, and advises by the authority of superior abilities.

The capture of three hundred of Morgan's guerrillas is reported, and it is stated as probable that the whole party will be caught before they reach the Ohio river. We have stationed gunboats at various points where they will probably attempt crossing.

It is reported that the rebels have erected another battery on Matthias Point, on the Potomac, below Aquia creek, and have fired on the steamer Peabody. A number of gunboats have been sent to the Point to reduce the battery.

Major McCook, father of Major General McCook, died at Pomeroy, on the 21st inst., from the effects of a wound received during the engagement with Gen. Morgan's gang at Buffington Island.

The Henderson, (Ky.) News says that the price of "young and likely negro men" has declined in that county to $850. Twelve months ago such hands would have brought $1600.

A private, in the 3d Corps, has been sentenced to be hung for having violated the person of Miss Carroll, a grand-daughter of the signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The soldierly feeling existing between Generals Banks and Grant is illustrated in the fact that Gen. Grant, at a certain crisis in his operations, invited General Banks to come up the river with his command and join him. "Tell Banks," said Grant, "there will be no quarrel between us about rank."

A man, who had been lost for four days in a coal mine in Derbyshire, England, was rescued the other day. His entire sustenance for ninety-one hours was the oil from his lamp, which he had sucked up. Although much exhausted when found, he soon revived, and, after a little food had been administered, he walked home.

Governor Harding says that Brigham Young is probably the richest man in America. The whole Mormon tribe pay tribute to him at the rate of about $40 per head annually. At the proper time of the year, immense trains are sent out to gather in the share of the harvest belonging to the Lord, &c., his prophet Brigham.

It is stated that the returns in the Medical Director's office show that since the war commenced 135,000 soldiers had been discharged from the army on a surgeon's certificate. This does not, of course, include any whose time was out, but comprises those whose health and physical inability to be a soldier prevented them from being of service in the army.

Hon. Albert Gallatin Brown, the colleague of Jeff. Davis in the United States Senate, came to Snyder's bluff on the 6th, and took the oath. He said he had never believed in Secession, had never been a Secessionist, and had never been in favor of the rebellion.—His wife, who was present, said his course had ruined her, and there need be no fears that he would act disloyal in future.

The condition of General Pemberton is pitiable in the extreme. His officers officers falsely and meanly ascribe his misfortune to all sorts of things, such as imbecility, &c., while he, poor man, is nearly crazy, and evinces in an unmistakable manner the humiliation and anguish he feels. He keeps confined to his room, and walks frantically all the time, tearing his hair, and giving all sorts of evidence that he is an insane man.

GENERAL EARLY.—Gen. Early, who is at the head of one of the divisions of Lee's army, and who recently made the demand of money and supplies from the town of York, Pa., is a native of this State. He was born in Carlisle. His father was a shoemaker, who lived in the outskirts of the then village, and brought his only other son up to his trade. This one, the General, left home at an early age, made his way to Lynchburg, Va., established himself there as a dentist, was successful, married a wealthy girl, and soon became one of the F. F. V.'s. He is familiar with the Cumberland valley, and no doubt aided in perfecting Lee's plan of invasion.

GREENBACKS AS FOOD.—A man in Ottawa county, Michigan, while plowing with his oxen received from a neighbor two hundred dollars in greenbacks, which for safe keeping he placed in the bottom of his dinner pail in the wagon. While away a short distance the oxen ate his dinner and money, and left him the alternative of killing one or both to secure the greenbacks. He concluded to dispatch the master ox, and, to his great delight, found the securities uninjured in his stomach.

TO BE DISCHARGED.—The Secretary of War has arrived at the determination to order the honorable discharge of all Brigadier Generals of Volunteers who are absent sick for more than thirty days. This does not apply to brigadiers whose absence is caused by the wounds received in action, but they will be required to furnish satisfactory medical evidence as to the probable length of their absence.

The Boston Herald says that since the draft there, large numbers of men from the Canadas have arrived in that city with the intention to offer themselves as substitutes.
