WARITEMS .- A Knoxville letter says : "The guerilla Reynolds was, a day or two since, confronted in prison here by a man whose under jaw had been shot away by a bullet. The prisoners were all drawn up in a circle, and the wounded man walked straight up to Revnolds. and, in dumb but terrible significance, pointed him out as the person who committed the deed. He was one of the three Union men whom Reynolds took data for the proper appreciation of it out of the hands of the rebel guard, and deliberately shot with his own hands sand men over the river. not long since. He thought they were all dead, but this man survived; and now, like one risen from the grave, confronts the murderer in his cell. Revnolds, it is said, turned very pale. He stands a chance of turning paler before long."

Mr. Secretary Stanton in a letter to Gen. Cadwalader, Philadelphia, dated Wednesday last says: "It is the design of the Government to keep up the national forces until the rebellion is overthrown, and in order to provide against any inopportune reduction when the service of the hundred days' men is out, a draft to fill up their place, and all other reductions, will be ordered to take place on the 1st of July, by which time the new enrolments will be completed.

An official report of the killed and wounded in the late battles presents the facts that 4,000 men were killed, about 25,000 wounded, and 5,000 missing—the latter including stragglers and prisoners. It is also stated, on the same accurate authority, that not more than ten per cent. have been dangerously wounded, and that a large number will be ready for the field within the next two

The Alexandria (Va.) Journal says that fifteen officers and three hundred men, all of them skedaddlers from the army of General Grant, were forwarded to Belle Plain, to be returned to their regiments. The officers were marched in the rear of their men, and a portion of them handcuffed together.

Many of the pieces of artillery captured from the rebels in the late battles. were found to be those previously taken from us. They are so superior to those made by the traitors, that they immediately use all as fast as they come into their possession.

A day or two ago the guerillas on the road to Belle Plain seized the ambulances with the wounded, took the horses and wagons, and left the passengers on the road. A dozen rebels were afterwards captured.

There are conflicting reports in regard to the noted rebel Gen. Stuart. If, however, he had been buried (as the Richmond Despatch of the 14th says), it will be safe to assume that he is dead, as the rebels only bury negroes alive.

It is asserted that the managers of the late New York Sanitary Fair are to be indicted for gambling. A number of gentleman were impanelled on Thursday morning as a grand jury, and the judge in his charge to them, referred to the crime of selling lottery tickets, as was done at the late Sanitary Fair- He instructed the jury that it was their duty to apply to the District Attorney, whose duty it was to assist them in bringing witnesses before them, and have all those who were guilty of this offence presented; and if sufficient evidence was attainable to prove that they were guilty, they, the jurors, were bound by their oaths to find indictments.

The calling out of the militia in Ohio has placed the business men in a helpless condition. Merchants have lost their clerks, and had to place ladies in their stead; publishers are minus their printers, and advertise for ladies to set type; farmers' sons and hired men have answered the call of their country, and the young women have shouldered the hoe and gone to the cornfields. An Ohio paper before us says that if the ladies cannot be induced to pick up the try papers will have to be suepended for a hundred days.

Rebel telegrams acknowledge the hideous massacre at Fort Pillow, and now the public will be anxious to know in what terms General Forrest will report his hundred-fold murdering to the rebel Government. With this document we have learned enough, from both loyal and rebel sources, to make out a terrible authentic case against the unprincipled and beartless leader who butchered the garrison at Fort Pillow with the help of a flag of truce.

It is most gratifying to hear the notes of preparation going on all over the country to make the Sanitary Fair most inhuman barbarities. Eyes were of Philadelphia a grand success. Everywhere the good work progresses. The employees on the Pennsylvania Railroad are moving in the matter, and iutend giving "a day's labor" to the patriotic cause, while the corporation has already given ten thousand dollars.

Gr Gen. Jas. E. B. Stuart, or as he was termed for short, Jeb Stuart, the well-known rebel cavalry leader, just killed in an encounter with Sheridan was born in Patrick county, Va., and graduated at West Point in 1854, was severely wounded in a fight with the Cheyenne Indians in 1857, and became captain of cavalry in 1860. He rose from a colonelcy in the rebel service to the chief command of cavalry. As long as the National cavalry was poorly handled and organized, Stuart had quite a name, and was a hero of romance. Tales were told him, and he dated back his descent to the royal Stuarts. As our own cavalry became famous under Pleusonton, Buford, Kilpatrick, Gregg, and, more lately, Sheridan, Stuart has been less and less thought of by his own side, as well as ours. After the old style of guerilla chieftains, it is said that a handsome young lady followed Stuart in all
