The Bachelor's Song.

I've been in love some fifty times—
Perhaps with fifty mixers—
From ladies like a flour barrel,
To ladies like the Sphynx,

And some of them had soft blue eyes,
Which turn'd my head with wonder,
And others were of deepest black,
And they my heart did sunder!

Some were as fair as lilies white,
And others like tomatoes;
Some were as soft as July shad,
And others like potatoes;

Some liv'd and spoke of days gone by,
Lose letters without number;
Some sigh'd, and in your arms they fell,
But it was not to slumber.

Some had cheeks like new washed sheets
And some as red as roses;
Some had sweet lips like cherries ripe,
And some had cherry noses;

Some had fine forms from Venus' mould,
And some from tub and barrel;
Some softly squeeze'd your either hand,
And others tried to quarrel.

But I have cast them all away,
And would as many more;
And scatter them on either side,
Like sea-weed on the shore;

For they have often made me think
Of pistols, rivers, halts;
And I have thought to kill myself,
For men's confounded daughters!

And now I am a bachelor,
And live all snug and quiet,
Except when with the cats I do
Kick up an awful riot!

I do not think of tender sighs,
Or make myself look thinner;
For all my romance and my loves
Are wasted on my dinner!

Religion—what is it?

Is it to go to church to-day,
To look devout and seem to pray;
And ere to-morrow's sun goes down
Be dealing slander through the town?

Does every sanctimonious face
Denote the certain reign of grace?
Does not a phiz that scowls at sin
Of veil hypocrisy within?

Is it to make our daily walk,
And of our own good deeds to talk,
Yet often practice secret crime,
And thus mis-spell our precious time?

Is it for sect and creed to fight,
To call our zeal the rule of right,
When what we wish is, at the best,
To see our church excel the rest?

Is it to wear the Christian dress,
And love to all mankind profess,
To treat with scorn the humble poor,
And bar against them every door?

Oh, no! religion means not this:
Its fruit more sweet and fairer is—
Its precept this: to others do
As you would have them do to you.

It grieves to hear an ill report,
And scorns with human woes to sport—
Of others' deeds it speaks no ill,
But tells of good or else keeps still.

And does religion this impart?
Then may its influence fill my heart;
Oh! haste the blissful, joyful day,
When all the earth may own its way.

It is important to have an umbrella in a shower, dinner when you are hungry, and a long boat in a squall; but the most important of all to a nice young gentleman is a nice young lady to say "Yes" at the right time.

The Richmond Sentinel of September 5th says the Chicago nomination is an "accommodation train."

A GIRL IN DISGUISE.—The citizens of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, are just now excited over a sudden and singular death which occurred in Lanesboro' recently. A boy giving the name of Henry E. Goodwin, recently made application to the Briggs Iron Works for work, and, although they were not in need of help, he pleaded so hard that employment was finally given him. His superior intelligence, modesty, and freedom from profanity and coarseness, and his great industry, all conspired to win the favor of his employers, who spoke of it to several gentlemen of the village, who also became interested in his appearance. Shortly after commencing work he was taken ill, and repaired to Munson's Hotel, where, in order to be apart from other boarders, he had a bed made in the garret. The care he received was not the best, and the patient grew rapidly worse, when a physician was finally sent for, who wished to examine his bowels, to see if they were bloated, but Henry objecting, the doctor did not insist. The next day he was worse, and on Monday the doctor found his case hopeless. He being insensible, the doctor made an examination and discovered that his patient was a woman—during the night the patient continued insensible or deranged, and died at seven o'clock on Tuesday morning. An inquest was held, at which it was ascertained that the deceased worked about a week for a Mr. Barton in Dalton, at farming, then came to Pittsfield and worked for Amos Shephardson, farming, at a dollar and a half a day, four days, but left as she could not do haying. She then applied for work at the Iron Works in Lanesboro', and with the sad result narrated above. The Pittsfield Eagle says that everywhere she conducted herself with extreme modesty and propriety, showed great industry. From letters found among her effects, she appears to have been the wife of Loeman Underhill, a soldier or officer in Battery D, First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, lately stationed at Fort Jackson, New Orleans. The letters are addressed "Dear Julia and Children."

The first ones speak of having sent her money, with some doubt, in one case, whether it was honestly delivered. The late ones speak of want, not having been paid, sickness, &c., and at least intimate a request for money.—She sent money away at two different times, at least—probably to her husband, and perhaps to her children—and there seems little doubt that she assumed her disguise in order to procure more remunerative pay, and died from over-exertion for those she loved. Her conduct throughout appears to be beyond reproach. A fine bowie-knife, ground very sharp, was found among her effects, and was doubtless intended for defence against insult. From passages in the letters, we infer that she may have been a native of Maine and removed to Wisconsin.

Mrs. Crocodile is an absent-minded lady. She bought a new bonnet not long since, and the first time she wore it on the street, she thought every one would surely notice it, of course. Presently she met Mrs. Simkins, who stopped her with a "Good morning, Mrs. Crocodile." "I bought it only a few weeks ago." "How is your family?" "One hundred dollars." Mrs. S. perceived that the mind of Mrs. C. was on her bonnet, and tried her once more. "Anything new, Mrs. Crocodile?" "Yes the feather is new, too—a new bonnet altogether." And so they parted.

One evening Douglas Jerrold was at a party where several other literary men and publishers were assembled, and the conversation turned upon epigrams. Jerrold gave his opinion that an epitaph should not consist of more than one or two words, including the name. When the laugh had subsided, for no one dreamed that he was in earnest, Charles Knight, who was present, handed a piece of paper and a pencil to Jerrold, and begged him to write his (Knight's) epitaph. Jerrold took the paper and instantly wrote down two simple words: "Good night!"

A dried-up, herring-faced, gimlet-eyed old bachelor says he don't wonder at so many of the young veterans getting married. He says one, who has faced a cannon's mouth and heard a thousand of them talk at once, can never be frightened, by a woman. The old dog! He ought to be compelled to climb a shell-bark hickory tree.

FOOLISH.—Two young ladies hating each other on account of a gentleman who don't care a fig for either.

SEASONABLE HINTS.—At this season many persons contemplate travelling; to do so with the largest amount of comfort and advantage, physical, social and mental, the following suggestions are made:—
Take one fourth more money than your actual estimated expenses.
Acquaint yourself with the geography of the route and region of travel.
Have a good supply of small change and have no bill or piece higher than ten dollars; that you may not take counterfeit change.
Dress substantially; better too warm for two or three hours at noon than be too cool for the remainder of the twenty-four.
Arrange, under all circumstances, to be at the place of starting fifteen or twenty minutes before the time, thus allowing for the unavoidable or unanticipated detention on the way.
Do not commence a day's travel before breakfast, even if it has to be eaten at daylight. Dinner or supper, or both, can be more healthfully dispensed with than a good warm breakfast.
Put your purse and watch in your vest pocket, and all under your pillow, and you will not be likely to leave either.

One of the most secure fastenings of your chamber door, is a common bolt on the inside; if there is none, lock the door, turn the key so that it can be drawn partly, and put the wash basin under it, thus an attempt to use a jimmy or put in another key, will push it out, and cause a racket among the crockery which will be pretty certain to rouse the sleeper and rout the robber.

A sixpenny sandwich eaten leisurely in the cars, is better for you than a dollar dinner bolted at a "station."

Take with you a month's supply of patience and always think thirteen times before you reply once to any supposed rudeness or inattention.

Respect yourself by exhibiting the manners of a gentleman and lady, if you wish to be treated as such, and then you will receive the respect of others.

WOMEN KILLED WITH CARE.—Every woman must have a best parlor, with hair-cloth furniture, and a photographic book; she must have a piano, or some other cheaper substitute; her little girls must have embroidered skirts, and much mathematical knowledge; her husband must have two or three meals every day of his life; and yet her house must be in perfect order early in the afternoon, and she prepared to go out and pay calls, with a black silk dress, and card case. In the evening she will go to a concert or lecture, and then, at the end of all, she will very possibly set up after midnight with her sewing machine, doing extra work to pay for little Ella's music lessons. All this every "capable" woman will do or die! She does it, and dies, and then we are astonished that her vital energy gives out sooner than that of an Irish woman in a shanty, with no ambition on earth but to supply her young Patricks with adequate potatoes.—T. W. Higginson.

An old clergyman one Sunday, at the close of the sermon, gave notice to the congregation that in the course of the week he expected to go on a mission to the heathens. One of his parishioners, in great agitation exclaimed: "Why my dear Sir, you never told us one word of this before! what shall we do?" "Oh, brother," said the parson, "I don't expect to go out of this town!"

"People may say what they will about country air being so good for 'em," said Mrs. Parfington, "and how they can fat on it; for my part, I think it is owing to the vittles. Air may do for camomiles and other reptiles that live on it. But I know that men must have something more substantial."

Joy is one of the greatest panaceas of life. No joy is more healthful or better calculated to prolong life, than that which is to be found in domestic happiness, in the company of good and cheerful men, and in contemplating with delight the beauties of Nature.

Why has a Clock always a bashful appearance?
Answer.—Because it keeps its hand before its face.

When it a man over head and ears in debt?
When he has a hat on which is not paid for.

Some one says that those who are crying for peace, misspell the word it is peace not peace, they want.

Upon the Truth Telling.

They say we are to young to love—
Too wild to be united;
In scorn they bid us both renounce
The fond vows we have pledged.
They send thee forth to see the world,
Thy love by absence trying;
Thou go; for I can smile farewell—
Upon thy truth relying.

I know that Pleasure's hand will throw
Her silken nets about thee;
I know how lonesome I shall find
The long, long days without thee.
But in thy letters there'll be joy;
The reading—the replying,
I'll kiss each word that's traced by thee;
Upon thy truth relying.

When friends applaud thee, I'll sit by,
In silent rapture gazing;
And oh! how proud of being loved
By her they have been praising!
But should Destruction breathe thy name
The world's reproof denying,
I'd love thee—laud thee—trust thee still
Upon thy truth relying.

When those who smile to see us part,
Shall see us meet with wonder;
Such trials only make the heart
That truly loves grow fonder.
Our sorrows past shall be our pride,
When with each other viewing;
Thou wilt confide in him, who lives
Upon thy truth relying.

SENSIBLE OLD LADY.—A deaf old lady who had brought an action for damages against a neighbor, was being examined, when the Judge suggested a compromise, and instructed counsel to ask what she would take to settle the matter. "What will you take?" asked the counsel of the old lady. She shook her head at the counsel, informing the jury, in confidence, that she was "very hard of hearing." "His Honor wants to know what you will take?" asked the learned counsel again, this time bawling as loud as he could in the old lady's ear.

"I thank his Honor kindly," said the ancient dame, "and if it's no inconvenience to him, I'll take a little warm ale."

In an Eastern town the postmaster has, by skillful maneuvering, managed to retain his office from the time of Harrison and Tyler, down to the present day. Being asked how he managed to keep his office through so many changes of Administration, he replied that "it would take a mighty smart Administration to change quicker than he could."

The other day several gentlemen were discussing the alarming prevalence of the crime of wife-desertion, women sleeping with other men, &c., when a well known Tonton, who had been listening with great attention stepped up, and in an excited manner said, "If my wife runs away with another man's wife, I will shake him out of her preches, if she be mine own fader."

A Jerseyman was very sick, and was not expected to recover. His friends got around his bed and one of them says:

"John, do you feel willing to die?"
John "made an effort" to give his views on the subject, and answered with his feeble voice—
"I think—I'd rather stay—where—I'm better acquainted."

Few have a more ready excuse for their homage than the Grecian sage, who, being asked why philosophers always ran after rich men, while rich men never courted philosophers, replied, "because the latter know they want money, while the former haven't sense enough to know they want wisdom."

The following is a verbatim copy of the certificate attached to the return of a Postmaster in Shawnee county, Missouri:

"I hereby certify that the four going in this world, is about as solacing as the assurance given by the Irishman to his wife, when she fell into the river: 'You will find ground at the bottom, my dear.'"

The following stanza, on the marriage of Reuben Wise, with Martha Cheavis, is exceedingly well told and witty:

"At length she seized the proffered prize
A happy one, believe us
For matrimony made her Wise—
Before she was Miss Cheavis."

A good deal of consolation offered in this world, is about as solacing as the assurance given by the Irishman to his wife, when she fell into the river: "You will find ground at the bottom, my dear."

One fellow says, when his stockings wear out, he sews up the toes straight across and puts them on his feet the other way, thus making a good fit for squared toed boots.

"I am on the trail of a deer," said the fellow said when he stepped on one of the female street sweepers.
