MARIETTA, PA:

Faturday, April 29,1865.

We clip from the New York papers the following items with regard to the homage paid the remains of President Lincoln: "One thousand singers performed a mournful dirge as the remains were carried by eight soldiers from the hearse to the Governor's room. The coffin was placed on an inclined plane so that the face was in full view of the passers for two or three minutes. The embalmers then rearranged the body, which had been somewhat disturbed by the journey, after which the ilid was removed, affording a view of the face and upper portion of the breast. The appearance of the dead President bears no marks of pain, but the eyes are sunken, the face somewhat discolored and sallow about the lower part, and dark around the eves and cheeks. The lips are very tightly compressed. The remains will not again be exposed to view until their arrival at Springfield. After the embalmers had prepared the body for public inspection, and the whole lid of the coffin being still open, a full length photograph of the corpse was taken. The lid was then closed, except enough to show the face, and the arms or legs of a statue. It has undercrowd was allowed to enter the City Hall. Many of the visitors were females, a large proportion of whom wept bitterly, and one or two endeavored to kiss the corpse, but were prevented. One poor Irish woman laid a small cross preserve your soul." The earnestness sleep of marble. John Wilkes Booth, and Harrold. his accomplice, were chased from Saint Mary's county, Maryland, where they have been secreted ever since the mur der, to Gamill's farm, on the Rappahannock, near Port Royal, where they took refuge in a barn. The barn was surrounded and a demand made for their surrender; Harrold was willing, but on Booth calling him a coward, he refused :the barn was then set on fire and upon getting too hot, Harrold presented himwelf at the door and had his hands hand cuffed; whilst this was being done, Booth fired on the soldiers, upon which a sergeant fired at him, the ball striking him in the head; he died in about an hour afterward, during which time he was whispering blasphemies against the government; Harrold was taken alive.-He, and Booth's body, were brought to Washington.

No President of the United State or member of the Cabinet was gever before mardered. An attempt was made to take the life of General Jackson, inhis day, in 1833, but-it-failed. The only Cabinet officers who were killed since the organization of the Government were Hona Abel P. Upshur, Secretary of State, and Hon. John A. Gilmer, Secretary of the Navy; under John Tyler's Presidency, in 1843. Both were from Virginia. They were killed by the bursting of Commodore Stockton's big gun, called the "Peacemaker," on board the United States steamer Princeton. The President, John Tyler, was aboard, and narrowly escaped a similar fate.

THE APPEARANCE OF THE PRESIDENT :-The following truthful description of the appearance and embalming of President Lincoln is taken from a Washington correspondent of a New Yorki pa-his grave, grotesque countenance, nor smoothed out a single feature. The bne was always sallow. The dark eyebrows seem abruptly arched; the beard, which will grow no more, is shaved close, save the tuft at the short, small chip. The mouth is shut, like that of one who had put the foot down firm, and so are the eyes, which look as calm as slumber. The collar is short and awkward, turned over the stiff elastic cravat, and whatever energy, or humor, or tender gravity marked the living face is hardened into its pulseless outline. No corpse in the world is better prepared according to appearances. The white satin around it reflects sufficient light upon the face to show us that death is really there.

Death has fastened upon his frozen

Three years ago, when little Willie Lincoln died, Drs. Brown and Alexander, the embalmers or injectors, prepared his body so handsomely that the President had it twize disinterred to look upon it. The same men, in the same way, have made perpetual those beloved lineaments. There is now no blood in the body; it was drained by the jugular vein and sacredly preserved, and through a cutting on the inside of the thigh the empty blood vessels were charged with a chemical preparation which soon hardened to the consistency of stone. The long and bony body is now hard and gone many changes. The scalp has the chest, opened, and veins emptied. All this we see of Abraham Lincoln, so cupningly contemplated in this splendid coffin, is a mere shell, an effigy, a sculpgone for ver.

INVESTIGATING THE MURDER.—By di-The common council had decided not rection of the Secretary of War, General Augur has issued an order prohibiting all those engaged in conducting investigations of matters connected with the murder of the late President, and the attempted assassination of Secretary Seward, from divulging any information brought out by the investigation, except to the War Department and the headquarters of the Department. - Une of the most remarkable circumstances connected with the assassination is that all the private boxes in the theatre had been engaged by unknown parties on the morning of Friday. They were unoccupied during the night, so that when Booth jumped on the stage after the commission of the act he did not fear arrest from any parties who might have occupied them. This is but another, and one of the strongest, evidences going to show the premeditation of the murder. The question now arises, who rented the boxes, and did it not naturally arouse suspicious on the part of somebody connected with the theatre to know that all the boxes were rented and yet not occupied? Events will oon determine these mysteries.

GENERAL SHERMAN'S BLUNDER. - From official dispatches it will be seen that Gen. Sherman has committed a most serious blunder in his negotiations with the rebel Gen. Johnston, touching what some would call a surrender, but what is really nothing more than a disbanding face all the character and idiosyncrasy on the part of the rebels, going home, of life. He has not changed one line of placing their arms in the State arsenals. and promising not to oppose the Government any more. According to the but the want of co-operation in those is rather bloodless and leaden; but he terms conceded by Sherman, the United States would be placed in a most humiliating position. We should lose everything we have been fighting for.

Was Gen. Sherman mad when he agreed to such terms? No sane man could have so utterly transcended his powers, knowing as be must have known that Grant, in the terms allowed to Lee. and in reply to propositions from the latter, emphatically disclaimed all authority to treat upon the question of an armistice, or any political subject whatever. Sherman had the same instructions from the President; yet in the face of them, he assumes the power to settle the entire political as well as military policy of the country.

It is true the Government promptly and in the strongest manner disapproved of the sad business, ordered Sherman to resume and vigorously prosecute hostilities, and in the mean time dispatching Lieut., Gen., Grant to relieve him of the command, with orders to compel the rebels to an unconditional surrender; but the blunder will still survive to dim the lustre of the fame of the man in whom we all had so much confidence.

Sherman was our model general. We regarded him as not only possessing military genius of a high order, but as stiff, so that beyond its present position intellectually the ablest of our commanit cannot be moved any more than the ders. In fact the force and style of his dispatches and letters impressed us with the belief that he enjoyed a respectable been removed, the brain scooped out, share of statesmanship. But it cannot be denied that to concede the terms he did, viewed in a military point, was an unparalleled act under the circumstances; and viewed in a civil or political at the foot of the coffin, with a "God ture. He lies in sleep, but it is the light, it can be accounted for only on the score of insunity. He seems to have been completely deluded by the wily rebels, who laid a trap for him, in order to gain time to escape from the vengeance of the country by making good their retreat into foreign lands, with the booty plundered from their own deceived and outraged followers.

> It has been stated that Millard Filmore's house in Buffalo has been discolored with ink, This is not a fact; but it is a fact disgraceful to the man that displays no mourning on his house. Nor has he, since the beginning of the war, exhibited the American colors, or shown the slightest sympathy with our soldiers or our cause. That Millard Fillmore is a disloyal man there remains not a doubt, and the American people should make him feel the force of their overpowering rebuke .- Chicago Tribune.

WHAT IT MEANT .- When the Richmond papers announced, a few days before the 4th of March, that an event was about to transpire which would send a thrill of joy throughout the South, and startle the world, it probably had reference to the tragedy which has since startled the whole country by its enormity. It is known that Booth intended to assassinate the President on that day, who were to assist him, defeated the plan. The "world has been startled," but the "thrill of joy" which was to be felt throughout the South, is now a feeling of fear for the consequences of their
