MARIETTA, PA: Salurday, May 20, 1865.

IT The trial of the fiends engaged in the assassination conspiracy, is progressing at Washington with open doors. Those upon their trial are directly implicated in the murder of either the President or attempted murder of Secretary Seward. They are David C. Harrold, Lewis Paine, Edward Spangler, Michael O'Laughlin, Atzerott, Dr. Mudd, Samuel Arnold, and Mrs. Surratt. Up to Saturday last the testimony was taken with closed doors, owing to its important character, as well as the apprehension of the witnesses being foully dealt with by the accomplices of the prisoners. The trial will doubtless consume a couple of weeks.

🐨 Miss Millie Francis, a dancer in the National Theatre, in Cincinnati, came to a sad death a few weeks ago. She had been dancing and lo! passing from the greenroom to the stage, in response to a second encore, drank a tumblerful of ice water, from the effects of which she dropped dead, in full view of the audience:

Governor Curtin has arranged Lat whenever a Pennsylvania soldier is killed or dies while in the service, transportation shall be furnished for one person from his home to the place where the remains of the soldier may be, and also for the free return of the remains and the person in charge.

F It will be recollected that Hon: James Harlan, Senator from Iowa, was, toward the close of the late session of Congress, nominated to and confirmed by the Senate as Secretary of the Interior, in the place of Judge Usher, resigned. President Johnson having requested him to retain the portfolio, and on Wednesday took possession of his post.

S Roger A. Pryor, in 1860, declared in a public speech that "the first antislavery President who was elected would be assassinated, and if there would be no other person to do the deed, he would be the Brntus to plant the dagger in his breast.

🐼 R. M. T. Hunter, the rebel bravado, and ex-U. S. Senator, has been arrested by a squad of soldiers sent for that purpose. He was found at his residence: near Richmond. He is now confined in a gunboat on the James River, CAPTURE OF DAVIS :--- Forney's Press, in speaking of the arrest of Jefferson Davis, says thus is the aristocrat the captive of the democrat-Andrew Johnafter he had ordered it to be given to the flames. Laden with spoils himself, ke left a starving and plundered people to be clothed and fed by the conqueror. And even as he saw ruin before and around him, and flying to save his own life, he attempted to force his armies into new conflicts, and to shed more blood in a lost and desperate cause: Caught at last, in the midst of the victims of his ingratitude and tyranny, after a reward had been offered for his arrest as an accomplice in the great assassination, his fate is the beginning of the end of a life never stained with dishonor until he broke the oath he swore to defend his country. Nor was the catastrophe wanting in the ludicrous. The proudest spirit of the South-the most sensitive of the slave aristocracy-whose pride it was to excel in every manly grace 'and every scholastic acquirement-assumed the garments of his wife to escape the search of the soldiers of the Union. We have often heard that the madame of the rebel monarch was the Catharine of the Court; but this is the first time that Davis has ever voluntarily assumed the petticoat. Oh, what a picture for the satirist ! We will not anticipate his punishment. But if his own cruelty to others is to be applied to himself, it will be one long and inconceivable torture. At any hour he could have saved thousands from death, by an honorable submission; but, in the face of defeat, he forced them to remain in the army, and to refuse the terms of the Government of their fathers. It seems to have been ordained, however, that he should only fall into the hands of justice after his armies had been crushed and 'his agents had implicated him in the blackest crime in human history. As the web of this vast conspiracy is being unravelled, tribution which should be as marked

The Indiana (Pa.,) Messenger is justly indignant at a family in that borough for placing a photograph of the assassin Booth in a prominent place in their photographic album.

When the rebel guerilla Moseby heard of Booth's assassination of the President, he is reported to have exclaimed : "Now, by ----! I could take that man in my arms."
