SYMPTOMS.

The symptoms of Catarrh are at first very slight. Persons find that they have a cold, that they have a cold, that they have frequent attacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of temperature. In this condition the nose may be dry, or a slight discharge, thin and acrid, afterwards thick and adhesive, may ensue.

As the disease becomes chronic, the discharges are increased in quantity and changed in quality; they are now thick and heavy, and are hawked or coughed off. The secretions are offensive, causing a bad breath; the voice thick and nasal; the eyes are veak; the sense of smell is lessened or destroyed; deafness frequently takes place.

Another common and important symptom of Catarrh is, that the person is obliged to clear his throat in the morning of a slick or slimy mucous, which has fallen from the head during the night. When this takes place, the person may be sure that his disease is on its way to the lungs, and should lose no time in arresting it.

"Mrs Stephens has justly become a faverite with all American readers of prose fiction, and the announcement of a new work from her graceful pen is eneerful news to moustands of readers. And there is a rare treat in stor for them, for in "The Soldier's Orphans," Mrs. Stephens has, if anything, eclipsed all her former efforts. There is less redundance of scene and action, but there is far more artistic excellence, and an elaboration of causes and effects, attainable only by practised wri-ters. The action of this new novel transpires in Philadelphia, and beyond the limits of the city the authoress does not permit herself to stray. The time selected by Mrs. Stephens;s recent, the late war, and she pictures wi vivid distinctness the domestic suffering a sacrifices entailed by, and made for, thegra and heroic struggle for national unity.
