The Mariettian.

MARIETTA, PA: Saturday Morning, February 16. 1867,

The celebrated "Immortal J. N. is dead. J. N. Free, for that was his real name, was a monomaniac of the purest water, who, while living, rejoiced in the rather elongated, if not egotistical title of "the immortal J. N.' the greatest orator, statesman, and philosopher of the age." For years past the whole current of the deceased's thoughts seemed to be directed to the thorough reconstruction of the Union, his theory being that in the late war both sections were right and both wrong, a hypothesis which but few could comprehend. "J. N." as he preferred to style himself, while laboring under a singular hallucin_. ation relative to the adjustment of our national difficulties, was a man of considerable intelligence and his insanity he had already kept the Jewish Sabbath. son, for forgery, confessed that he had was of a perfectly harmless nature.

About fifty years back a married couple, residing in Paris, adopted a male child that had been found in the streets, although having a son of their own. The two children were brought up together, and received the same education. The foundling went into business and made a large fortune, while his benefactors met with reverse, and died; leaving their son, a cripple, unprovided for. The adopted son then devoted. himself entirely to his companion in infancy, refusing to marry in order not to be forced to quit him, and has now just died, leaving him a fortune of nearly a million francs.

The Prince of Wales is becoming a rude, swaggering, drinking, gaming scallawag who can be restrained in his evil practices neither by the influences of his mother, the protestations of the Court clergy, nor the consciousness of what appertains to royal dignity. The Washington correspondent of Forney's paper of Thursday last, says: "Gen. Sickles was called to New York last night by the intelligence of the serious illness of Mrs. Sickles, and this morning news was received of her death. Mrs. Sickles was the daughter of Professor Bagioli, of New York, and is remembered as one of the most brilliant and fashionable women ever seen in Washington. She was elegantly educated and gifted with most fascinating manners She was married to General Sickles very young, and her first appearance here, in the heigth of her youthful beauty, during General Pierce's administration, will be long remembered. Since the terrible tragedy with which her name was unhapily connected she has steadily excluded herself-from all the circles in which she was at one time a leading and welcome participant. The cause of her death was believed to be the heart disease."

George Peabody's donations to charitable and benevolent purposes, including the liberal provisions for the surviving members of his family, since his last visit to his native country, will amount to some five millions of dollars. Of course in this sum is not counted his magnificent contribution to the poor of London. The fact that his last gift of over two millions of dollars shall be distributed among the entire population of the South and Southwestern States, "without other distinction than their needs." is a splendid refutation of the mischievous charge that he was disaffeeted to the Union cause throughout the war.

A Union man is under indictment in Johnson County, North Carolina, for stealing four pounds of meat from the so called Confederate States. How to CLEAN OFF Snow .- The snow may be easily softened and cleaned from pavements and yards, even when it is hard frozen and trampled down; by sprinkling common table or fish salt over it. In ten or fifteen minutes it will be soft and may be swept off with a stiff broom. We have seen it tried frequently. Five cents worth of salt will be enough for the pavement in front of any house, and fifteen minutes after reading this you may clean up in front of the house, and perhaps save your neighbors a severe fall on the slippery walkway.

How to BE RICH. Nothing is more easy, says Mr. Paulding, than to grow rich. It is only to trust nobody; to be friend none; to get everything and save all-weiget; to stint ourselves and every body belonging to us; to be the friend of no man, and to have no man for your friend; to beap interest upon interest; cent upon cent; to be mean, miserable and despised for some twenty or thirty years, and riches will come as sure as disease and disappointment.
