Family Sewing Machine

The most simple, complete and easily managed Sewing Machine now in use. It does every description of work—never stops at or needs to be helped over seams, but does all its work rapidly and well. The needle requires no adjustment—you cannot get it in wrong—it makes an even width of hem you wish—does braiding beautifully. The Braider is in the foot of every machine and part of it,
and is always adjusted, never gets out of place,
and you can change between purchasing any other, at

THE WISHING CAP.

If fairy-tales were true,
And fortunes were my hap,
I'll tell you what I'd do
If I'd the wishing cap:
I'd make each maid a wife,
Who'd give both heart and hand;
And all domestic strife
I'd banish from the land.

No arm that wrought or plough'd
Should ever toil in vain;
The great should not be proud,
The small should not complain;
The friendship of a friend
Should last through good and ill;
And, constant to the end,
Should guide the wanderer still.

And rulers should be just,
And people should be wise,
And swords and spears should rust
For lack of enemies;
The triumphs of our time
Should bless the poorest lot,
And misery and crime
Should die and be forgot.

How He Lost His "Stamps."

The Cleveland Herald relates the following story: A man and his wife who have been living on the West Side, not on the most peaceable terms, separated the other day, and, as the sequel shows, the wife, whom he had taken for "better or worse," got the best of it. Having converted considerable of his property into cash, with the view of an ultimate separation from her, he placed the money—$2,400 in Government bonds—between the lining and outside of his vest, taking care to have the aperture through which it reached the depository carefully sewed, by a woman with whom he was at peace, or, in other words, had buried the hatchet. This woman, doubtless believing she would eventually be well paid for her trouble, told it to a friend, with an injunction "not to whisper it for the world." That friend whispered it to another in whom she had the utmost confidence, with a similar injunction, and the secret (?) finally leaked into the wife's ear.

One night while the husband, who like Phlegm in the Black Crook, occupied "separate apartments," was sleeping soundly, she stole into his room, carried away the vest, and quickly transferred the money to her bosom, (perhaps) replacing it with a medical alumina. In the morning the husband happened to be unusually gross. A quarrel ensued, followed by an actual separation, he going to the depot, and she to a National "Bank" to draw the interest on the bonds. At the depot he informed a friend of the separation, and putting his hand on the alumina, said she would regret the course she had taken, for he had "all the stamps." Swearing he would never return, he took the Toledo train, with fifty to one hundred dollars in his pocket, and has not been heard from since. Probably he has not had occasion to use the "stamps" in his vest. His wife has gone to her friends in Indiana with nearly $4,500, including the interest, which will buy her a snug home, or a dozen divorces in that State; if she should happen to get any more unruly husbands.

TIME OF EATING.—The proper time for eating, is when the previous meal has been thoroughly digested, and entered into the circulation; and when after an interval of rest, the wants of the system are indicated by a natural desire for food. If our habits are right, this will be a safe unerring guide. A natural appetite usually recurs about every six hours, but it is greatly influenced by the nature of our diet, the state of the mind; the amount of exercise, etc. If the appetite fail, wait for it; there is more danger of making the interval too short, than too long.

A Dutchman thus describes an accident: "Vonce, a long while ago, I went into my apple-orchard, to climb a bear-tree to get some beeches to make trow a blum-budding mit; and ven I gets on de tobermost branch, I fall from the lowermost limb, mit von leg on both sides of de fence, and like to stove mias outside in."

A story is told of a young man who was crossed in love and attempted suicide by taking a dose of yeast powder. He immediately rose above his troubles.

Miss Tucker says it is with bachelors as it is with old wood. It is hard to get them started, but when they do take flame they burn prodigiously.

We have heard many contumacious words than the following: "Why is kiaman's notice?"

For The Marietta.
Mr. Editor:—Having been reminded that it was "my turn to write," and not having either the time or strength before leaving home to prepare an original article, I ask the privilege of inserting the following noble testimony in behalf of our good cause.

The stand taken by men of honor and influence such as Hon. Wm. E. Dodge, and the late Gov. Wright, added to the worthy and elevated ground occupied by the young States of Iowa, is an effectual rebuke to the sneers with which the glorious reform is still greeted, in some quarters. W. A. F.

Temperance.

Hon. William E. Dodge, in a late Temperance address, said: "The inves- tigation of Carpenter and those scienti- fic men in Paris and London have given us the most impregnable Gibraltar against all the sophistries, whether they come from New York or Boston. Gov. Andrew does not touch the latest scientific investigations in Europe, and does not pretend to answer them; on the contrary he cites old absurdities in reference to the nutritiousness of alcohol. But the experiments made by French chemists and by Carpenter, Munroe, and others, just as decidedly establish the scientific fact that alcohol is not nutritious, as Franklin established the identity of electricity and the lightning of the clouds. Science never goes backward. Great truths once as- certained and well established become as firm as the everlasting hills. I count it, therefore, a cause of great congratulation that science has come now to the aid of Christian philanthropy, and gives us a new stand point whence to penetrate the gigantic evil, making our positions more than ever impregnable."

The late Governor Wright had the manly frankness to set an example in the capital of Prussia which will be remembered to his eternal honor. While occupying his position as ambassador at Berlin he gave evidence of his American independence and unyielding devotion to what he considered Christian duty, by utterly refusing to allow the use of wine or liquors in his house—a measure unheard of in the court circles of Europe, and one which did not fail to bring upon him much censure from the press, both at home and abroad. It was characteristic of him that when a matter was once settled in his mind on a question of moral right, it could not again come up on any side issue. Adherence to right was the guiding principle of his life.

At a meeting of the Congressional Temperance Society, held at the Capital in Washington recently, Hon. Mr. Grinnell, of Iowa, stated that every officer of his State, from Governor down, and every Judge and official connected with the Courts of State, had signed the total abstinence pledge, and were honorably maintaining the same. He expressed strong hopes that total prohibition would very soon obtain in that State, and already there was for this cause a strong preference shown by emigrants from the East in favor of making their homes in Iowa, in preference to States where the traffic in liquors is practically unrestricted. He further stated that in his District, comprising a population of over one hundred thousand souls; there was not a single place where liquors were sold at retail. In his own town there has not been a drop of liquor sold publicly in twelve years. There are no tenants in the jails, and all the paupers in his District would not fill a street car.

This example of the young, thriving and prosperous State of Iowa is worthy of general emulation. Let her example be held up as a beacon on the hilltops of our advancing civilization, for the guidance of her older but less enlight- ened sister States.

Cold Feet.—A child should never be allowed to go to sleep with cold feet. The thing to be last attended to in putting a child to bed, should be to see that the feet are dry and warm. Neglect of this has often resulted in a dangerous attack of croup, diphtheria, or fatal sore throat. Always, on coming from school, on entering the house from a visit or errand in rainy, muddy or thawing weather, the child's shoes should be removed, and the mother herself ascertain if the stockings are the least damp, and if so they should be taken off the feet, held by the fire, and rubbed with the hand till perfectly dry, and another pair of stockings and another pair of shoes put on, and the stockings and shoes placed where they can be well dried, so as to be ready for use at a moment's notice.

New Way of Popping the Question.

Mr. Smithson (an improvement on the celebrated name of Smith) wished to take Miss Brownly (another improve- ment) to the opera. He had been on terms of intimacy with the family for about five years, but "never spoke of love;" on the contrary, he had frequen- tly declared his intention of leading a bachelor's life. Once he put his hand to the bell-handle and was admitted.

"Oh, James," exclaimed Miss Jane, "where have you kept yourself so long?"

This took Smithson a little aback, for he had spent the preceding evening with the family. Before he could answer, however, Jane's brothers and sisters (eight or ten in number) had gathered about him. Summoning all his courage, he said:

"I have come to ask you—"

"Not here, James; not—now—oh!"

"That is," stammered Smithson, "if you're not engaged—"

"Oh! Oh! water—quick!"

"What's that?" inquired her father.

"Who's engaged?"

"I didn't mean," says Smithson in conclusion—

"Of course not," continued Mr. Brownly, "you've always been our favorite."

Then advancing, and taking poor Smithson's hand, he said:

"Take her—she's a good girl, and loves you to distraction. May you ever be happy as the day is long!"

Thereupon father and mother and children crowded about Smithson and wished him joy, and company coming in at the moment, the affair was told them as a profound secret. So Smithson got a wife without popping the question, and almost before he knew it himself. But we cannot help thinking he was hurried into matrimony.

How to GET UP EARLY.—Place a basin of cold water by the side of your bed; and when you first wake in the morning, dip your hands in it and wet your brow, and sleep will not again seal you in its treacherous embrace. This advice is given by an aged man, who had been in the habit of rising early during a long life. By attending to this advice, you may learn to rise every morning at five o'clock. The editor has found it a better plan to go to bed at one regular hour; leave your bed the moment you awake of yourself, after daylight; nature will thus regulate the sleep to the exact amount required by the system.—Hall's Journal of Health.

In a Western Sabbath School a boy was asked to give an account of Moses.—Moses, said the boy, was born on the banks of the Nile in a basket. As the infant lay in the basket, concealed in the bushes, a huge crocodile came swimming along, and approaching him, said: "Moses, almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian!" Whereupon the infant stretched out his little arms toward the crocodile, and said: "Verily, thou art the man!"

Dr. Frank Buckland, the English naturalist, had a Brazilian monkey which he wished to take from Southampton to London in the passenger car, but the guard of the train objected, and said he was a dog, and must go in the dog-van. The Doctor took a tortoise out of his coat pocket, and asked the guard if that, too, were a dog. After attentive con- sideration, the guard replied slowly, but firmly, "No, sir—them's all right—they be hinkse."

Seasonable hints, if true—the oil of pennyroyal will keep mosquitoes out of a room, if scattered about even in small quantities. Roaches are exter- minated by scattering a handful of fresh cucumber pebbles about the house. No fly will light upon a window which has been washed with water in which a little garlic has been boiled.

The inhabitants of a noted fever and ague district in Illinois are said to turn their "stitches" to some account. They climb into the top of a shell, half just as the chill comes on, and by the time the "personal earthquake" leaves them, there is not a hickory stick left on the trees.

A pickpocket is said to have been doing a good business on the lines of a railroad out West, by going into a car, refusing to pay his fare, and picking the conductor's pocket as he is putting him off.

"I see the villain in your face," said a judge to a prisoner. "May it please your worship," replied the latter, "that's a personal reflection."

A Beautiful Sentiment.

Shortly before the departure of the lamented Heber for India, he preached a sermon which contained this beautiful illustration:

"Life bears us on like the stream of a mighty river. Our boat at first glides down the mighty channel—through the playful murmurs of the little brook and the windings of its grassy borders; the flowers seem to offer themselves to the young hands; we are happy in hope, and grasp eagerly at the beauties around us; but the stream hurries on, and still our hands are empty. Our course in youth and manhood is along a deeper and wider flood, among objects more striking and magnificent. We are animated by the moving pictures and enjoyment and industry all around us; we are excited at some short lived disap- pointment. The stream bears us on, and our joys and our griefs are alike left behind us. We may be shipwrecked, but we cannot be delayed; whether rough or smooth the river hastens on till the roar of the ocean is in our ears and the tossing of the wave is beneath our feet, and the floods are lifted up around us, and we take our leave of earth and its inhabitants, until of our future voyage there is no witness save the Infinite and Eternal."

GOOD RULES FOR ALL.—Profane swear- ing is abominable. Volgar language is disgusting. Inquisitiveness is offensive. Tattling is mean. Telling lies is contemptible. Slandering is devilish. Drunkenness is disgraceful. Laziness is shameful. Vain babbling is nonsensical. Cheating is damnable. Avoid all the above vices and aim at usefulness and honesty. This is the road by which to become respectable, and to establish a good character.—Walk in it, and never leave it. Never be ashamed of honest labor. Pride is a hateful curse—a hateful vice. Never act the hypocrite, but always speak out boldly, and let the world know what you are. Keep good company. Speak the truth at all times. Never be discour- aged, but persevere, and mountains will become mole hills.

WHICHING BUTTER.—A peddler in the Highlands, having run short of butter, applied to a farmer's wife for a supply.

"How muckle div ye want?" said she.

"A pun' will do," said the peddler.

"'Tanna mak' ye a pun?" replied the woman; "I has na a pun' weight."

"Weel, what weight has ye?" said he.

"'Twa pun' do," said the woman.

"And what is the weight?"

"Oh, it's jest the tanga."

"Weel," said he, "put one leg in the scale, and the tither 'oot, and that will be a pun' then."

The woman did as requested, but when it was weighed, she looked doubt- fully at the butter, and said—

"It looks a muckle pun'."

"Oh, it's all right, woman," said the peddler, "how much is it?"

"A saxpence," was the reply, which the peddler paid; and departed rather hastily.

TRANSPLANTING FULL-GROWN TREES.—Thirty beautiful elms fully forty feet in height, were removed from their native forests, and replanted in front of the site of Congress Hall at Saratoga, to take the place of the trees destroyed by fire. They are now in full leaf and ap- pear to be thriving under this singular treatment. The same thing has also been accomplished in Scotland and in Paris.

In the town of Flyptheocreek there was a shoemaker who at times officiated as preacher. He always wrote the notices himself, in order to save the ex- penses of printing: Here is one of them: "There will be preaching in the pines this Sunday afternoon on the subject, All who do not believe will be damned at three o'clock."

A negro passing under a scaffolding where some repairs were going on, a brick fell from above on his head and was broken by the fall. Sambo very coolly raised his head and exclaimed—

"Hallo, yon white man up dar, if you don't want your bricks broke, jus' keep 'em off my head."

"Have you any traveling inkstands?" asked a lady of a young stationer. "No, ma'am, we have them with feet and legs, but they are not old enough to travel yet."

What is the largest room in the world? The room for improvement.
