PEACE COMMISSIONERS AND MR. LINother two positions. COLN ; On Monday morning, the Peace Commissioners, headed by John Tyler and Governor Chase, called upon Mr. Lincoln-Mr. Chase introduced the deleverywhere admitted that his best speechegation. For all Mr. Lincoln had a smile and a kind word. He recognized. with great cordiality, several of his former colleagues in Congress, and particof the foreign Governments sympathize ularly expressed his delight with meeting | with the secession movements in the Rives, and Summers, of Virginia; Bar-South, but on the contrary, express the ringer, of North Carolina; Johnson, of utmost solicitude for the pereservation Maryland, and some other of the leading spirits in the Convention. He remarked that they were the only men who came up, in personal appearance, to his previ ously-formed ideas.

All were much pleased with the recep tion, and expressed themselves agreeably disappointed with the President elect's personal appearance. After the visit of the commissioners, a request was made to admit the ladies. Mr. Lincoln replied by saying that if the ladies desired to see him, he was on hand, and a large concourse of the fair sex were introduced, passing through to the adjoining apartment, where they were very graciously received.

MR. LINCOLN'S INAUGARATION .- The Committee on the Inauguration, at Wash ington, have fully agreed on their pro gramme. At first it was decided to admit the people into the Capitol, but the objections to this were at once apparent, and the usual mode of procedure at previous inaugurations was followed. The platform has been erected on the Eastern portico of the Capitol. The assertion of Southern journals that military and civic companies will join in any procession or escort for the President elect are entirely without foundation .-No military companies from a distance have signified their intention to be in Washington, and those in the city will not turn out, of course. The regular forces now in Washington will not serve as an escort

The steps are concealed, and descend only with the opening of the doors. The lining is of crimson brocatelle, and the cushions and it is a luxuriously fitted up establishment, The cost was $1500. It was forwarded to Washington on last Monday. THE COMPROMISE : The Peace Conference on Wednesday afternoon adopted the propositions for adjustment as amended by Hon. Thomas E. Franklin, of Lancaster. Messrs. Wilmot and Meredith of the Pennsylvania delegation dissented. Well informed parties at Washington say there is no doubt that a good start has been made to bring about ultimately a permanent settlement. This day, says Forney's Press will be forever memorable in the political history of our country, as it was signalized by two very important events-the final passage of the new tariff bill, and the satisfactory conclusion of the patriotic labors of the Peace Conference.

WASHINGTON ITEMS : It is not the intention of Gen. Cass to leave Washington before the 6th of March, being determined to see President Lincoln in. augurated. He says it is the last ceremony of the kind he shall probably ever see.
