SORES, by the perfect purity which these Life Medicines give to the blood, and all the humors.
SCORBUTIC ERUPTIONS and Bad Complexions, by their alterative effect upon the fluids of the system, and the morbid state of which occasions all eruptive complaints, scallow, cloudy, and other disagreeable complexion.

The effect of these Pills for a very short time will effect an entire cure of SALT RHEUM and a striking improvement in the clearness of the skin. COMMON COLDS and INFLUENZA will always be cured by one dose, or by two in the worst cases.
PILES, The original proprietor of these Medicines, was cured of Piles, of 35 years standing by the use of the Life Medicines alone.
FEVER AND AGUE.—For this scourge of the Western country, these Medicines will be found a safe and certain remedy.
Other medicines have the system subject to a return of the disease—a cure by these Medicines is permanent—try them, be satisfied, and be cured.

BILIOUS FEVERS and LIVER COMPLAINTS.—General Debility, Loss of Appetite, and Diseases of Females—The Medicines have been used with the most beneficial results in cases of this description—Kings Evil, and Scrofula, in its worst forms, and the most powerful agent in its cure, yields to the mild and powerful action of these remarkable Medicines. THE FLAG OF THE FREE.
Air—Red, White and Blue.

Oh well we remember the story,
When Columbia, the child of a day,
Bore her banner, all covered with glory,
Wherever the tyrant held sway!
[Chorus]—
"We die on the field or are free!"

Chorus—"We die on the field or are free,
We die on the field or are free,
And their shouts rent the blue vaults of ether,
We die on the field or are free!"

The memory be cherished forever,
Of the martyrs who fell on the field,
Who swore that their heart-strings should sever
Ere to Tyranny's mandates they'd yield,
Oh! sacred the spot where they perished,
And green may their graves ever be,
And age after age shall be cherished
That flag that waved over the free!

The heroes have gone to their slumber,
And silent and peaceful they lie;
While the stars, still increasing in number,
Like a wave seem to mirror the sky—
And high over the land, and on ocean,
In victory it streams far and wide,
Till our hearts seem to burst with emotion,
As we gaze on the banner with pride.

Where'er dash the wild waves of ocean,
Where'er its dark waters divide,
Where the storm bill fortells its commotion,
There floats out our banner in pride—
On mountain top, plain or in valley,
Wherever a footstep may be,
The hosts of Columbia doth rally,
And shout for the flag of the free!

Oh brethren, say, say, would ye sever,
The bond once cemented in gore?
Would ye share that proud banner? Oh never!
Till Time and its trials are o'er,
Beneath its broad folds—and so other—
When discord and madness shall flee,
Let us rally, each man as a brother,
And shout for the Flag of the Free!

BANK BILL PASSED.—The Senate passed the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Banks, removing the penalties incurred by a suspension of specie payments, and requiring all banks to resume on or before the first day of June next, and to pay into the State Treasury one-quarter per cent. upon their capital stock as a punishment for their violation of the law. These provisions are only applicable to such banks as suspended since last November. As quite a number of banks deny that they ever suspended specie payments, a provision was inserted in the act whereby the Auditor General will be enabled to ascertain the facts in those cases where it is suspected that banks seek to evade the payment of the special tax upon their capital stock upon the allegation that they never suspended.

ENFORCE THE BIRD LAWS.—The Legislatures of several States have enacted stringent game laws for the protection of animals, birds, and fish, and it becomes farmers particularly to see that they are strictly enforced, as far as pertains to birds. Scientific men of high authority very generally agree that the alarming increase of destructive insects, which cause the loss of so much grain and fruit, is mainly in consequence of the wholesale slaughter of their natural enemies, the birds, that had previously kept them in due bounds. Let every cultivator post conspicuous notices upon his farm, forbidding all persons to enter the fields with a gun, under penalty for trespass. This may be done, and the offenders punished, where no game laws exist.—Let every bird murderer be dealt with rigorously.

The Norfolk Day Book says: "A gentleman on a Ferry boat, some time back had a twenty-five dollar over coat that he could swallow a mouse; the bet was accepted, the mouse produced, and down it went, in a style that would have shamed a Chinaman and done credit to a Chinese juggler. The loser then offered to bet $100 that mouse-swallower could not swallow a cat, but the bet was declined. The swallowing of the mouse is as true as it is strange."

C. B. Crook, an old Whig, of Alexandria, and vouched for by the Alexandria Gazette as a Whig, and a true Virginian, has been appointed as Post-office route agent, and compelled to promise his resignation to a committee at Lynchburg. He stayed in the mail car all night at Lynchburg to avoid personal violence. If the government sends the mails on this route he reafter it will be at the expense of the national honor.

Wit is the most dangerous talent one can possess. It must be guarded with great discretion and good-nature, otherwise it will create you many enemies; it is perfectly consistent with softness and delicacy; yet they are seldom found united.

LOVE, JEALOUSY AND RUIN.

There have lately been developed in Buffalo the particulars of one of the saddest histories of love and suffering which has ever come under our notice. The story is briefly as follows:
A young lady, resident of the south western portion of New York State, became betrothed to a young villager. The engagement had lasted through two years of unbroken affection when a new visitor to the place—a middle aged man—agent of an eastern agricultural firm, became introduced to the lady, and won her esteem by his dignified and intelligent conversation so as to finally become acknowledged as a permanent acquaintance. His attentions became disagreeable to the lover of the lady, who requested her to discourage them, which she mildly, though firmly refused to do, adding the superior age and courteous deportment of the stranger as her excuse. Finally, the young man, meeting his mistress in a carriage with the agent, asked her to alight and walk with him, a discourtesy to her present cavalier which she would not submit to, and proceeded on her ride.

The young man, in a fit of disappointment and desperation, returned home, accumulated a few necessities, and left the same day for Buffalo, vowing never to return. In the meantime his betrothed, hearing of his absence, on her return, was almost maddened by regret and remorse. On the same night she fled from her home, and followed the tract of her lover.—She reached the city on the ensuing morning, almost destitute of means, ignorant of her course, and without a single acquaintance in the river of faces which surged on every side. She spent—poor, tender hearted, persevering soul—nearly three days in constant but hopeless pursuit of her lost idol, wandering in her search through the streets, into offices, and even extending her simple, fruitless inquiries to the doors of dwelling houses; never finding a single trace of him she sought, persevering even in despair. The end of all this was terrible. She was ensnared by the Mielstrom that has drawn so many waifs like her into its awful vortex, and lost, like her myriad sisters, in its depths. Her parents in time searched for their love as she had searched for hers, found her in helpless wickedness, and took her back, and home. And this, very lately. A letter had come to the village soon after she left, from her lover, saying that he had gone west from Buffalo; which accounts for all. He knows the sequel now, reproaches himself for all, but will not, dare not, as he says, though he loves her still, go back to gaze upon the ruin which he ascribes to his own wild temper.

A SKELETON STORY.—There is a very strange story current in Kittanning just now, in which it is related that a farmer named Hooks, residing in one of the adjacent townships, has become suddenly rich through the discovery certain buried treasure, with the existence of which he became acquainted in the following singular manner. While digging a hole for a fence post one day, he struck upon a hollow substance, which he afterward discovered to be the skull of a human being. Being a gentleman of weak nerve, the sight at first appaled him, but resuming his labor he succeeded in digging out the entire skull, beneath which he found a brass kettle containing some beads and other relics, and also a small box, within which he found a paper on which were words written in the French language. This writing he afterwards took to Freeport, and had it translated by the Catholic priest then residing there. It stated among other things that the deceased formerly resided at Le Boeuf, in Erie county; and that certain treasures of which he was possessed were buried at a particular place in that locality. Shortly after this, Mr. Hooks absented himself from his family, and was not heard of in the neighborhood for some time. However, one pleasant morning he returned, enjoying the very best health, and has ever since been in the enjoyment of such quantities of money as to lead his neighbors to infer that he availed himself of the information conveyed by the mysterious writing, and has become possessed of the wealth of the defunct Frenchman. The story is related by a gentleman of undoubted veracity, who is acquainted with Mr. Hooks and his circumstances, and avers that the facts are substantially true as we have stated them.

Women often fancy themselves to be in love when they are not. The love of being loved, fondness of flattery, the pleasure of giving pain to a rival, and a passion for novelty and excitement—are frequently mistaken for something far better and holier, till marriage disenchant the fair self-deceiver, and leaves her astonished at her own indifference and the evaporation of her romantic fancies.

People talk about the equality of the sexes—they are not equal. The silent smile of a sensible, loving woman, will vanquish ten men.

The prospect of the Peach Crop of New Jersey is reported as a very promising one.

HONOR TO GREAT MEN'S RELATIVES.

A paragraph has been going the rounds of the papers stating that a sister of Robert Fulton was an inmate of the poor-house of a town in Pennsylvania. Upon seeing this, Mr. Chas. F. Morton, of Mortonsville, New York, whose father had been an intimate friend of Fulton's, wrote to the place named, requesting information, with a view to the immediate raising of a fund for the relief of any such relative. Mr. Morton sends us the following copy of the spirited reply:
SROUENBURG, Monroe co., Pa.,
August 30th, 1859.

"DEAR SIR: Yours of the 23d inst., directed to the superintendent of the Monroe county poor-house, Pennsylvania, is received. There is a mistake in the printer somewhere. We have no 'poor-house' in Monroe county, consequently we have no superintendent of such an institution. Our postmaster handed the letter to me, and requested me to answer it.

"I recollect reading the same intelligence in some paper a few days ago, and I think it was in Monroe county, Virginia—the printer may have taken 'Va.' for 'Pa.' There is no person by the name of Fulton in our county, and I assure you that if there were (within the limits of our county) a sister to the immortal Fulton, she never would become an inmate of a poor-house! She would be taken into one of our best families, and treated as a sister.

Respectfully yours, M. H. DRISLER.
"C. F. MORTON, Esq."
This is a creditable expression of Pennsylvania spirit, and it accords well with what we read of the feeling of the Quaker State in a recent paper. It runs thus:
HONORS TO DR. FRANKLIN'S DAUGHTER.
"When Miss Sallie Franklin, the only daughter of the great printer, was married to Mr. Richard Bache, in Philadelphia, in 1767, all the shipping in the harbor displayed their colors on the happy occasion."—Home Journal.

QUIT THAT. Quit telling your innocent, confiding, trembling children about ghosts and hobgoblins. You are throwing a sorrow upon young hearts that will cling there through life. How many mothers there are who quiet their children by saying, "The bugaboos will come and take you off—come old nigger—come ia, will you hush up this minute?" The poor child believes all its mother tells it, and why shouldn't it? It ought to believe. That is its filial duty. The sobbing, fluttering heart is quieted, but not comforted. Those tearful eyes close in a sleep of terror; a weary, broken rest follows; the child dreams, but oh, who can tell the sadness of a child while it dreams in a sleep frightened upon it by alarms of all that is terrible and repulsive. Such inhuman treatment endangers the mind—the intellect. Mothers, beware! See that no servant or nurse, or older brother or sister drives arrows of grief to the very soul of your child. A sorrow early planted and watered by fears will bring forth a harvest of bitterness and despair.

How common it is to teach children to fear unseen dangers at nightfall! The peaceful night, so full of sweetness, and night that brings the honeyed drops of dew, to bless the flowers and refresh the leaves, the night that brings rest to the weary, this dearest time of all is to be made terrible to children. What wickedness? Why, it is blasphemy to make little ones believe that God forgets them, and sends tormentors to trouble them in the silent watches of the night. Parents, think of this, see that yours bear no ghostly lessons. See that they are taught to love the ever present Saviour, and honor his ever blessed name. How heavenly the teachings of that familiar hymn, when breathed from a true mother's soul over a sleeping child:
"Hush, my babe, lie still and slumber,
Holy angels guard thy bed!"

The love of being loved, fondness of flattery, the pleasure of giving pain to a rival, and a passion for novelty and excitement—are frequently mistaken for something far better and holier, till marriage disenchant the fair self-deceiver, and leaves her astonished at her own indifference and the evaporation of her romantic fancies.
