

DAVID McKINNEY & CO., Editors and Proprietors.

Presbyterian Banner

THE PRESBYTERIAN BANNER. Publication Office: BAKER BUILDING, 100 W. 10th St., PITTSBURGH, PA.

VOL. VIII., NO. 27. PITTSBURGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 24, 1860. WHOLE NO. 391.

A Little White. Beyond the stilling and the weeping. I shall be, soon. Beyond the waking and the sleeping. Beyond the sowing and the reaping. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the rising and the setting. Beyond the coming and the parting. Beyond the fading and the brightening. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the parting and the meeting. I shall be, soon. Beyond the farewell and the greeting. Beyond the pulse's fever beating. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the rest and the toiling. I shall be, soon. Beyond the weary and the cheering. Beyond the sick and the curing. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the living and the dying. I shall be, soon. Beyond the weeping and the cheering. Beyond the mourning and the praising. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the parting and the meeting. I shall be, soon. Beyond the farewell and the greeting. Beyond the pulse's fever beating. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the rest and the toiling. I shall be, soon. Beyond the weary and the cheering. Beyond the sick and the curing. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the living and the dying. I shall be, soon. Beyond the weeping and the cheering. Beyond the mourning and the praising. I shall be, soon.

Beyond the parting and the meeting. I shall be, soon. Beyond the farewell and the greeting. Beyond the pulse's fever beating. I shall be, soon.

delivered to me. I acknowledge that it was nothing but an honest debt, which I was liquidating with the money I sent you. It was not an act of favor, but of simple justice.

The Rev. John Smith, in the spirit of true benevolence, has been pleased to bestow on his friend, Mr. Joseph Hill, the handsome sum of five hundred dollars. An act so noble and disinterested, deserves to be recorded to the praise of the generous liberality and kindness of the Reverend donor.

Such a statement would involve a gross falsehood. True, John Smith did pay to Joseph Hill five hundred dollars, but it was not a gift, it was only payment of a debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

of as being taught music. One or two quarters after they had come to man and womanhood under the "singing master" in a night school of two hours of frolic and mirth, one-third, or sometimes one-half the instructor, and a villain had refused to repay it.

The Rev. John Smith, in the spirit of true benevolence, has been pleased to bestow on his friend, Mr. Joseph Hill, the handsome sum of five hundred dollars. An act so noble and disinterested, deserves to be recorded to the praise of the generous liberality and kindness of the Reverend donor.

Such a statement would involve a gross falsehood. True, John Smith did pay to Joseph Hill five hundred dollars, but it was not a gift, it was only payment of a debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

paramount. He who went to the breathing of the Holy Spirit, and the Christian Church, was not a man of easy-going, naturally contented men. He was a man of high principle, and he had faith to believe that his life became because of his help. He could help it. There was no necessity that Paul be buffeted, and scourged, and driven like a hunted convict all over the Roman Empire.

The Rev. John Smith, in the spirit of true benevolence, has been pleased to bestow on his friend, Mr. Joseph Hill, the handsome sum of five hundred dollars. An act so noble and disinterested, deserves to be recorded to the praise of the generous liberality and kindness of the Reverend donor.

Such a statement would involve a gross falsehood. True, John Smith did pay to Joseph Hill five hundred dollars, but it was not a gift, it was only payment of a debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

to the credit of an unprincipled ignorant quack. And if Christ has healed your soul, helped you to overcome temptation, and constrained you by his love to keep his law, it is dishonorable to God and injurious to man to say that you were healed by the quack.

The Rev. John Smith, in the spirit of true benevolence, has been pleased to bestow on his friend, Mr. Joseph Hill, the handsome sum of five hundred dollars. An act so noble and disinterested, deserves to be recorded to the praise of the generous liberality and kindness of the Reverend donor.

Such a statement would involve a gross falsehood. True, John Smith did pay to Joseph Hill five hundred dollars, but it was not a gift, it was only payment of a debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

therefore it is that they remember their pastor. And now, in conclusion, let me say to other congregations; "Go and do likewise." M. R. E.

The Rev. John Smith, in the spirit of true benevolence, has been pleased to bestow on his friend, Mr. Joseph Hill, the handsome sum of five hundred dollars. An act so noble and disinterested, deserves to be recorded to the praise of the generous liberality and kindness of the Reverend donor.

Such a statement would involve a gross falsehood. True, John Smith did pay to Joseph Hill five hundred dollars, but it was not a gift, it was only payment of a debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

there was a trace of one hundred and twenty years before the first stroke of the bell and the first crash of the thunder. Noah's gray preaching repentance. The ark stood useless for years, a huge lumbering stock for the scow's wit; it stood till it was covered with age, and its builders with the contempt of the world; and many a sneer had these men to bear, as pointing to the serene heavens above, and an empty ark below, the question was put, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Most patient God! Then, as now, thou wast slow to punish—"Waiting to be gracious!"

The Rev. John Smith, in the spirit of true benevolence, has been pleased to bestow on his friend, Mr. Joseph Hill, the handsome sum of five hundred dollars. An act so noble and disinterested, deserves to be recorded to the praise of the generous liberality and kindness of the Reverend donor.

Such a statement would involve a gross falsehood. True, John Smith did pay to Joseph Hill five hundred dollars, but it was not a gift, it was only payment of a debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.

When we say that John Smith has saved his grace, we do not employ the word grace as a sign-post; we do not attach to it a sham significance; we do not make it a synonym with debt.