A Christian Boy's Influence.

When Frank was twelve years old he had received but little religious instruction. His parents were not Christians. His father paid but little regard to the Bible, and argued that conversion was not necessary in order to go to heaven. He had removed with his family, about five years before, to a new settlement in the wilderness. There were but few families scattered around him. Two of his sons were married and lived near him. They were intelligent and fond of reading, and they did much by arguing, and circulating books and papers, to spread the deadly errors in which they had been brought up, in that little neighborhood. There Frank lived.

When he was about twelve years old, he went away to spend several weeks with relatives, in a place where he was instructed in the Bible, and where he heard the preaching of the Gospel. It was all quite new to him. He was anxious to learn about religion. The Holy Spirit convinced him of his sins. He prayed that God would give him a new heart. He found the Saviour, and gave very clear evidence that he had become a Christian. Soon afterwards he returned to his father's house, where it was not easy for a boy to live as a Christian.

About a year after this, there was preaching in that new settlement, and there were several persons who were awakened and hopefully converted. Among the converts were the two married brothers of Frank. who began at once to pray in their families, and destroyed their bad books.

The father did not attend any of the meetings. But I conversed with him. and endeavored to induce him to attend to the that any impression was made upon him till I asked him this question: "What influence has religion had upon Frank? Do you think it has made him any better?"
"Yes, sir," said he, "I think it has made him better. I suppose that he was no worse than other boys before. But he is a good boy now. I must say that for him." His feelings choked his utterance, so that he could say no more. In a few days he submitted his heart to God, and was himself rejoicing in the Saviour he had found. No doubt the good conduct of that boy, as a Christian, was one means of leading his father to Christ. Every Christian boy can exert a powerful influence for good upon those about Needle Work.

Needle-work is thus gracefully eulogized by Nathaniel Hawthorne in the "Marble Faun.'' "There is something extremely pleasant and touching-at least, of very sweet, soft and winning effect—in this peculiarity of needle-work, distinguishing men from women. Our own sex is incapable of any such by-law aside from the main business of life; but women-be they of what earthly rank they may, however gifted with intellect or genius, or endowed with awful beauty—have always some little handiwork ready to fill up the tiny gap of every va-cant moment. A needle is familiar to the fingers of them all. A queen, no doubt, plies it on occasions; the woman-poet can use it as adroitly as her pen; the woman's eye that has discovered a new star, turns from its glory to send the polished little instrument gleaming along the hem of her kerchief, or to darn a casual fray in her dress. And they have the advantage of us in this aspect. The slender thread of silk or cotton keeps them united with the small, familiar, gentle interests of life, the continually operating influences of which do much for the health of the character, and carry off what would otherwise be a dangerous accumulation of morbid sensibility. A vast deal of human sympathy runs along this electric line, stretching from the throne to the wicket chair of the humblest seamstress, and keeping high and low in a species of communion with their kindred beings. Methinks it is a token of healthy and gentle characteristics, when women of accomplishments and high thoughts love to sew, especially as they are never more at home with their own hearts than when so occupied.

Uneducated Women.

There is no sight so truly pitiable as that afforded by a rising family of children under the guardianship of an ignorant mother. We would be understood by the use of the term ignorant, as wishing to convey the picture of a mother whose maiden days were devoted to the acquirement of fashionable accomplishments, to the exclusion of solid mental culture and acquirements. The woman who reigns the queen of the ball room is very seldom found capable of being the governess of her own children: and the time spent at soirce and route will be bitterly regretted when age brings experience and consequent remorse for the evil she has inflicted, and her incapacity to discharge properly the interesting and important duties of her station, when it was her natural duty to be at once an instructor and an example. The maiden who casts aside her book for the cotillion, will never win the love and esteem of a sensible man; and should she select a partner for life among her partners in the dance, she will find, when it is too late, that her choice has been as unfortunate as the place where she first attracted his notice was injudicious. We look with pain upon that wife who enters upon her second era with fashionable ideas of society. Her first era has been devoted to the attainment of certain rules and systems scarcely pardonable in the girl, certainly censurable in the wife, and criminal in the mother.

The following remarks by Hannah Moore, so forcibly express our views on the subject, that we give them in lieu of anything further from ourself: "When a man of sense comes to marry, it is a companion whom he wants, not an artist. It is not merely a creature who can paint and play, sing and dance—it is a being who can comfort and counsel himone who can reason and reflect, and feel and judge, and discourse and driscriminateone who can assist him in his affairs, lighten his sorrows, purify his joys, strengthen his principles, and educate his children. Such is the woman who is fit for a mother and the mistress of a family. A woman of the former description may occasionally figure in the drawing-room, and attract the admiration of the company; but she is to train up a child in the way it should Agricultural.

Many farmers cannot find time to raise those articles of comfort and luxury which are eaten by the laboring classes of the cities.

The garden is planted with potatoes, beans, a little corn to boil with them, a bed of beets and onions, and perhaps a few tomatoes, so that the variety of food placed upon their tables, is not as large as would conduce to their health and enjoyment. If it can be done, select a piece of ground that is sufficiently moist not to suffer by drought, and having manured it well, plow it thoroughly, if two or three times, so much the better. Those that are so disposed, can display their taste in arranging the different articles raised, in a pleasing, attractive manner, so as to be an ornament to the homestead, as well as of great service, in supplying food for the family. In selecting the kinds of vegetables and fruits to be raised, care should be taken to raise such as ripen at different times, so that the table will be well supplied throughout the entire season. A practical farmer who is in comfortable circumstances, once remarked to us that he could not afford to mistake. Who has a better right to the best fruits of the earth, than the man

We say to all who have any land, culmany others, and such fruits as will add comfort and happiness to the family. Do not plant too soon; wait patiently until the ground is in a suitable condition. Hoe often and keep the earth as much pulverized as possible, and it will be found that a garden of half an acre will not only family, but add much to the profits of the farmer.

Tree Washes.

Various preparations have been proposed for this purpose, and, indeed, almost all alkalies have been used in turn. In some sections of the country we see the trunks of trees whitewashed with lime, perhaps this is the most barbarous of all the plans which have been proposed, for although the lime, if used when first slaked, may have some power to decompose organic substances occupying the surface of the bark, still, in degree, it disorganizes the bark itself, and as lime changes into a carbonate. Life of Jackson. it fills the surface so as to prevent, in part, the healthy respiration of the tree, and bright, clean, smooth bark never results after such practice. Solutions of potash, when saturated, destroy the cocoons, and ova of insects, and occasionally destroy the tree itself, therefore become dangerous. Soda may be used with impunity, without injuring the bark of any tree, for although it causes the rapid decay of the dead portions of the bark, it has no effect on the living parts. A saturated solution of soda be sprinkled over the surface of the most delicate plants in green houses, it will dry in white spots upon the leaves, and will not injure them. When applied to fruit trees, it does not injure the buds, while the cocoons and ovas are fully decomposed. All mosses and fungi disappear upon its use, and the after growth of the tree will throw off the decomposed portions of the dead bark; indeed it leaves the tree perfectly clean, and as clean trees are less liable to be attacked by insects, proves a protechas been applied frequently, to the point where the branches commence, and it is now evident that the portion of the tree thus treated, is in finer health and larger, relatively, than the parts immediately above it not reached by the soda.

The soda should be thus prepeared: Heat one pound of common sal soda in an iron pot, to redness, this will force out the carbonic acid and water, rendering the soda caustic; then dissolve in one gallon water, and when cold apply it with a mop to the thicker portions of the branches, trunk, etc. The dews and rains will remove it from the surface of the tree in due time.-Working Farmer.

"I mean," said the farmer, "that you sat still and said Go; I get up and say, Come. You lie in bed, and enjoy your ease; I rise early in the morning, and attend to my business." In other words, this was an industrious man; there was no love of idleness about him, and this led to his success

To Make an Obstinate Horse Pull. A correspondent of the Cotton Planter

Let me tell you of an infallible method of making a horse pull up hill, or any where else that his muscles are able to carry him. Take a small rope—a plow-line, tor example-double it, make a loop, of the entirely unfit for a helpmate to a man, or double end, and draw it snugly around the under jaw of the animal, just behind his front teeth, with the loop underneath. Throw the loose end over your shoulder, and walk in the way he should go, holding fast, and pull steadily and firmly. Do n't be troubled about him, for he will follow without fail, after he has discovered how you have got him. This will also compel an animal to stand quiet to receive the bridle or collar.

Miscellaneous.

General Jackson.

After the war of 1812, General Jackson was never seen at the cock-pit, and seldom on the race-ground, though his love of horses was a love that never grew cold.

He was no great reader of books. His library at the Hermitage consisted chiefly of resentation copies, and the Biblical commentaries, so eagerly read by the General raise strawberries, and other fruit of like at a later day. He was always a devourer nature; it would do for those who got their money some other way, but farmers could not afford to eat them. Now this is a great read aloud in the family circle. In earlier years, he had been a warm admirer of the eloquence of Henry Clay. He once declared with peculiar emphasis, that it was the perusal of Mr. Clay's speech against the recharter of the United States Bank, tivate not only the coarser vegetables, but in 1811, that convinced him of the unconstitutionality and impolicy of a National Bank. The later speeches of Mr. Clay in favor of the Bank, we are well aware, could not shake the convictions of 1811. Mr. Calhoun's war speeches were keenly relished by the General, as were the dimplomatic dispatches of Mr. John Quincy Ad increase the wholesome luxuries of the ams. Monroe, Calhoun, Adams, and De Witt Clinton, were the public men who stood highest in his regard at this period. The conversation of General Jackson, when at home among his familiar friends, related chiefly to the warlike exploits of nimself and his companions. Revolutionary anecdotes, of which his old friend. Gen. Overton, had a large stock, were particularly pleasing to him, and he was fond of telling over the story of his own boyish adventures during that contest. In speaking of the defence of New Orleans, he usually attributed his success to the direct interposition of Providence in support of the weak against the strong.-Parton's

We Have Got a Baby at our House. The Boston Post is the authority of a good story of a bachelor friend: Our friend was riding, a day or two ago through Athol, in this State, where he overtook a little girl and boy apparently on their way to school. The little girl ap-peared to be five or six years old, and was as beautiful as a fairy. Her eyes were lit up with a gleam of intense happiness, and her cheeks glowed with the hues of health Our bachelor looked at her for a moment admiringly. She met his glance with a smile, and with an eager voice saluted with 'Have you got a baby?" He was struck aback by the question, and something like a regret stole over his mind as he looked upon the animated and beautiful little face before him. "No," he answered. "Well," she replied, drawing her tiny form proudly up, "we have," and passed on, still smiling, to tell the joyous news to the next one she might meet. If no candidate has a majority of all the lectoral votes, then the House must, from the three highest, make the election, and that, too, by a majority of all the States. If they fail to do this previous to the 4th of March, then the Vice President shall act as President. If no Vice President shall have been elected by the House, then the Senate shall choose one from the two highest numbers on the list voted

It will be seen, therefore, that, if no President or Vice President should be chosen next Fall, and if the House of Representatives shall fail to elect either. the Senate will have the appointment of the Chief Magistrate, though it can only select from two names presented by the House. Hugh Miller and Drink.

When employed as a mason, it was usual for his fellow-workmen to have an occasional treat of drink, and one day two glasse of whiskey fell to his share, which he swal lowed. When he reached home, he found on opening his favorite book-" Bacon's Essays"-that the letters danced before his eyes, and that he could no longer master the sense. "The condition," says he, "into which I brought myself was, I felt, one of degradation. I had sunk by my own act, for the time, to a lower level of intelligence than that on which it was my privlege to be placed; and although the state could have been no very favorable one for forming a resolution, I in that hour determined that I should never again sacrifice my capacity for mental enjoyment to a drinking usage; and with God's help, I was enabled to hold by the determination."

The above is given more to convey an idea of the general character of the work than as an index to its voluminous contents, which will embrace everything of interest to intelligent religious minds.

We believe a general record like this, to which every one might turn for authentic information on all topics of current religious interest, has long been wanted, and would be found of great convonience, not only to clergymen and other church officers, but to all interested in the moral and religious movements of the age. It has been the aim of the publishers to supply this want, and in THE AMERICAN CHRISTIAN RECORD to present a work which would enable all Christians familiarly to understand one another's faith, efforts, and strength, in which each should be able to read the past and present story of his particular denomination, and compare it with that of others; and in which all might perceive at a glance, first, the efforts of individual institutions and then the result of their united operations throughout to antire world.

In conclusion, we venture to say, that so vast an amount of raried information on religious subjects has never before been brought within the compass of a single volume.

THE PACIFIC EXPOSITOR.

The PACIFIC EXPOSITOR is to be devoted to the exposition of God's Word, and the preaching of the Gospel, according to the Standards of our Church. We wish to do by the Press, for our fellow-citizens, just what we do for Calvary congregation every Sabbath; that is, to expound, explain and preach to them the Word of the Living God. We would, if possible, furnish sermons to be read on the Lord's day, in the lonely place of our valleys and mountains, where there is no pastor or evangelist to open his mouth and show the way of salvation; and into the crowded village of miners, farmers, and travellers, where as yet there is no house of worship, we desire to send the Exposiron, to open to them the Scriptures, and preach unto them Jesus. It is well known that a large number of the half million of souls that are on this coast do not attend any church or meeting-house; many thousands of them never hear a sermon preached from year to year. We would furnish them with such reading as would remind them of their early training—the home of their fathers, with a perfect heart and a willing mind. We hope to make, the Exposiros a missionary, that may preach even where the colporteur and the evangelist do not go.

Not one dollar of the subscriptions will be appropriated to the editor's private use. All that is subscribed beyond the actual cost, will be spent in extending the circulation of the work among our miners, cattle-drivers, farmers, sailors, and travellers. The Exposiros will be issued every month, at Three Dollars per annum, in advance. It will make an octave volume of over six hundred pages. It is very neatly printed, and on good paper. The postage prepaid to any part of the United States is one ox extr for each number. Gold dollars, or three dollar pieces, or drafts on the San Francisco Express Companies, can be sent at our risk, by mail.

CATARACT WASHING MACHINE: W. E. BRAMAN & CO.'S CLOTHING, TIME, AND LABOR SAVED! INDISPENSABLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. The most simple, economical, and durable article ever effered to the public to alleviate the discomforts of wash-day. DESCRIPTION.

DESCRIPTION.

It consists of a metal cylinder, with ribs on the inside, and an interior cylinder of wood, with ribs. There is a space of from six to eight inches between the two cylinders. One crank turns both cylinders at the same time in opposite directions, rapidly creating a suds, forcing the water through the clothes, and effectually removing the dirt. The action of the water does the work quickly, dispenses entirely with rubbing, and thus saves the wear of clothes.

LIVER PILLS,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE

Hepatitis or Liver Complaint.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver. AIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increase on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade. and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms ettend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER. Dr. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF Ague and Feyer, when taken with Quinine, re productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

Address all orders to FLEMING BROS., PITTSBURGH, PA. P.S. Dealors and Physicians ordering from others than Floming Bros., will do well to write their orders distinctly, and take none but Dr. N. Lane's, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pitthough, Far. To those wishing to give them a trial, we will forward per mail, post paid, to any part of the United States; one box of Pills for twelve three-cent postage stamps, or one vial of Verminge for fourteen three-cent-stamps. All orders from Cana's must be accompanied by twenty cents extra.
