He dressed shabbily and with regard to convenience rather than elegance. On land he was awkward and uncouth, like most suilors; but on shipboard he was a very different man, like certain birds, appearing to far better advantage on sea than on shore. He had in his professional capacity visited many portions of the world, and whether battering down the towns of the West India Islands, or leaving his ship in a line, which contains sentiments so becoming to make fierce anglaughts on the cities of a sound and unprejudiced mind, under the unto make fierce onslaughts on the citics of Palestine, whether sailing up the Chesapeake to quell the rebellious Americans, or combating in behalf of a foreign crown in the Atlantic Ocean, he was ever the same bold, hearty, fighting sailor. He passed through all his battles, by land and sea, comparatively unhurt, and like his distinguished contemporary, Lord Dundonald, at last died peaceably in his bed, and at an age which but few men in the less exposed and dangerous walks of life reach.

The Eclectic Magazine,

For December, is on our table. It is embellished with a beautiful steel engraving of Rev. Dr. Van Rensselaer. A glance at the articles, eighteen in number, causes us to anticipate much pleasure, as we shall find leisure to read them. The Magazine is monthly. Each number contains one or two steel engravings, and 144 pages of letter press. It makes three volumes of about 600 pages each, per year. The subscription price is $5.00 Address W. H. The Literary and Professional Works will make five volumes, and will be numbered from XI to XV. As we begin with the LITERARY AND PROFES-SIONAL WORKS, (which are complete in themselves) the first volume of our issue is numbered XI on the back and on the title-page. After volumes XII, XIII, XIV, and XV are issued, we shall begin issuing the PHILOSOPHICAL WORKS, numbering the volumes from I to X. Thus, when the complete works are published, the numbering of the vol-umes will be found regular from I to XV. In this way we acoid the clausey look of double title pages, and of double lettering on the back of each volume. We issue the LIT-EHARY AND PROFESSIONAL WORKS first, although they come after the PHILOSOPHICAL in the order of vol-umes, in order to meet the wieles of the public. The fifteen volumes of our clitch will be a reprint of the seven thick Svo. volumes of the English edition. The Eng-lish editors often refer in their prefaces and notes to other volumes of this edition, for example, the word three, first page of the preface in volume XI, third line from the bottom, should be seven; and the words this volume which contains the matter of volumes XI and XII, and a small portion of vol. XIII in our edition. Errors of this kind will be earefully avoided in the future. Only two or three of them occur in the farst volume with a list of errata, thus enabling us to give the American public an edition, in should be seven; and the words this volume which contains the matter of volumes XI and XII, and a small portion of vol. XIII in our edition. Errors of this kind will be earefully avoided in the future. ### Disunion.

Accounts from the South are still conflicting It is generally believed that South Carolina will make the attempt to secede, but that, most likely, she will be alone. An effort is being made to have a Convention of all the Southern States. In that case, it can hardly be doubted but that counsels of peace will prevail. We give, in another place, numerous extracts, showing that disunion is resisted.

Washington letter writers are almost, if not entirely, unanimous, in stating that the Presientirely, unanimous, in stating that the Presi-dent's forthooming Message, already prepared, is States intend to resist the inauguration of Linvery strong against secession. He maintains coln as President of such States as may choose the ground taken by Gen. Jackson, in 1832, and that of the fathers of the Constitution. In this it is said that he is sustained fully by Attorney General Black, and by all the Cabinet except ern Union, under his administration, is obligated Secretaries Cobb and Thompson.

The unsettled condition of affairs is drawing together many Members of Congress at this early date.

Southern Sentimen t.

Many suppose that Disunion and Secession. i the South, of which so much is now said, is almost a universal sentiment. But this is alto gether a mistake. The great body of the people in all the Southern States, with the exception of South Carolina, is strongly opposed to the present excitement; and even in South Carolina there are many, as there were in 1832, who have no sympathy with the present course of things in that quarter.

Throughout the South the supporters of Bell and Everett, most of the supporters of Douglas and Johnson, and not a few of those who voted for Breckinridge and Lane, are decided and unyielding in their attachment to the Union as it now is. As evidence of the truth of our statement we give the following indications, which, it will be seen are gathered from the District of Columbia and almost all the Southern States. A correspondent of the New-York Post writing from Washington says: Last Sunday morning Mr. Buchanan attended Dr. Gurley's church, on New-York Avenue. The for dissolution. He had been constitutionally Rev. These three lines from the Frankfort (Ky.) Statesman are sufficiently explicit :

We have not yet met a man since the election who considers the election of Lincoln a sufficient cause for a dissolution of the Union.

A long letter from Governor Magoffin, of Kentucky, appears in the Frankfort Yeoman. The Governor counsels the people of his State to re-frain from rash measures and to "wait for the benefits of this enterprising State, to diffuse the overt act."
