The statements in regard to the fortifica-ions vary with the feelings, or objects, of tions vary with the feelings, or objects, of the writers. It is hard to see how honest men could differ as the writers do. Bayard Taylor, writing to the Tribune, greatly depreciates the works. He puts them down at such a rate as to make believe that the rebels were simpletons to risk themselves there, and our army-President and allmarvellously imbecile to permit them to abide there, so long.

A correspondent of the New-York Times. who accompanied Gen. Sumner, speaks, differently. At Sangster's Station, on the way out, information was received that Manassas was abandoned. "A feeling of regret was visible on each countenance, all were so eager for a fight. This feeling, however, gave place to another, as the corps advanced. Having arrived at Bull Run, he says:

"We were now fairly in the rebel stronghold. Every hill—and it is all hills—was surmounted with fortifications of some description. The approaches were through narrow defiles, that could be easily swept by the enemy's artillery, and, in fact, it seems as through there was not one inch of ground but what was covered by reach of guns, if not by continuous intrenchments. We began to appreciate the value of our bloodless victory when we saw the formidable works that would have stood in our way had the enemy remained to contest the passage. The guns were all removed or buried, and in one or two places logs were mounted in place. To those who are disposed to contemn the rebel strength here and assert that an advance at any time would have met with like results, we can only give the answer that is provided in an important item of this war's history.

"An advance was made last July, under a good General. We know the result: the enemy, without one-tenth part of the fortifications now to be found there, drove us back in a disgraceful panic. If, as some seem disposed to assert, they have had only wooden guns there, then wooden guns are churches paid. GEO. D. STEWART, S. C. very effective weapons. S. J. M. EATON, S. C. their front.

"The rebels have evidently had comfortable quarters here, their collection of cabins resembling primitive Western villages. They are to be seen for miles in every direction, and seem to be of sufficient capacity to accommodate 100,000 men."

Such being the strength of the place and the numbers of the enemy, the generalship is to be admired which made its abandonment a necessity.

Another writer says : "After our forces had taken possession of Manassas, the Prince de Joinville, upon examining the place and its defences, remarked that in place and its defences, remarked that in adjourned to meet in Litchfield, Ill., on Friday Europe, to have compelled an enemy to before the Second Sabbath in April, 1862, at 7 evacuate such a stronghold without the loss of a man, or even without firing a gun, would have been considered the most brillight achievement of the whole campaign."

Upon the whole we may be truly thankful that our foe abandoned a place which he long and skillfully fortified, and where he might have given us much trouble, and have dealt to our troops terrible destruction.

ISLAND No. 10., in the Mississippi bas proved a much more formidable place than some of our stay at-home Generals anticited. The enemy had fortified it skillfully and strongly, and had also planted on the left bank of the river four heavy batteries. In addition to all these he had placed several gunboats in the river. A difficulty occurs to Com. Foote in the management of his fleet. The vessels were built for fighting up the river, not down it. The BATTLE AT PEA RIDGE, Ark., was even more severe than at first represented. Gen. Curtis was far from his supplies, and had but fifteen thousand men. The enemy rile, on the Second Tuesday in April, (8th,) at had collected all his forces, about twentyfive thousand, and made a desperate assault.

Wendell Phillips.

This noted abolitionist lectured in our city, last week. The attendance was large and orderly. The lecture was somewhat tame for Wendell. He showed his disunionism less strongly than he did in Washington. He is for, not the Union, but a Union-abolition by the war power, conquest, confiscation and a remodelling of the Southern States.

The lecturer passed from here to Cincinnati, where he attempted to speak, but was treated to hisses, eggs, and a breaking up of the meeting.

Battle near Winchester, Va.

MARCH 23. - We have this day achieved a glorious victory over the combined forces of Jackson, Smith, and Longstreet. The battle was fought within four miles of Winchester. It raged from half past ten o'clock this morning unt dark. The enemy's strength was about 15,000. The strength of our division was not over 8,000. The loss of the enemy in killed and wounded is not ascertained, but it is double that of ours. We have captured a large number of prisoners and some of their guns. The ground is strewn with the arms they have thrown away in their flight. The cavalry is still in pursuit of the retreating enemy. The particulars cannot be accurately

MARCH 24.—A dispatch, from a Surgeon in Gen. Shields' army, to the Surgeon General at Washington, says in relation to the battle of yesterday; Our loss is from seventy-five to one hundred killed, and two hundred and fifty wounded the second to the bundred and twenty-five of the I have seen two hundred and twenty-five of the enemy's dead. The enemy's forces consisted of 500 of Ashby's cavalry, five thousand infantry and nine pieces cavalry, nve thousand mantry and nine pieces of artillery, with a reserve of eighteen pieces of artillery. The fight was kept up till noon, when a charge was made by the Ohio infantry. The 1st Michigan and 1st Virginia cavalry on their right drove them back half a mile, when the enemy got their guns in position in dense woods, flanked by infantry, and drove us back. An artillery engagement ensued, when Gen. Shields, through Col. Kimball, ordered Col. Tyler to turn protected by the stone ledge. The 84th Pennsylvania and 13th Indiana then charged their entre, and the fight became general.

Col. Murray, of the 84th Pennsylvania, was killed. Gen. Banks, who was on his way to Washington on Sunday, returned and assumed command. In the meantime, Shields' division, commanded by Col. Kimball, pursued the enemy beyond Newton, shelling them the whole way.

Jackson's men are perfectly demoralized, and beyond control. They threw overboard their counded to lighten their wagons.

Those of our troops principally engaged wer the 84th, 110th Pennsylvania; 4th, 7th, and 8th Ohio; 7th, 18th and 14th Indiana; 1st Virginia and Michigan cavalry, and Daum's battery of Good judges say the enemy's loss is over 200 killed, 800 wounded, and 800 prisoners, including Jackson's aid.

Our loss is, killed 65, wounded about 125.

During the fight, Gen. Shields, who command During the nght, Gen. Shields, who commanded in person, was struck by a fragment of a shell on the upper part of the left arm, shattering the bone, producing a compound fracture, and it was feared amputation would become necessary. The General remained on the field after wounded, giving his orders until the close of the fight. On unday morning he was in cheerful spirits, hough suffering some pain; up to that time, it was not known whether or not amputation would

I only hope that we may in future be able to carry out in detail the remaining plans of the campaign. The only thing, I have to regret is the delay caused by the elements.

"I must defer, for want of itime, a detailed account of the action. It is enough to say that, after an engagement of four hours, we succeeded in carrying a continuous line of field works of over a mile in length, protected on the river flank by a battery of thirteen heavy guns, and on the opposite flank by a line of redoubts of over half a mile in length, for riflemen and field pieces, in a mile in length, for riflemen and field pieces, in the midst of swamps and dense forests; which line of works was defended by eight regiments of infantry, five hundred cavalry and three bator meanry, are numered cavalry and three dat-teries of field artillery, of six guns each. The position was finally carried by a most gallant charge of our men, which enabled us to gain the rear of all the batteries between this point and Newbern, which was done by the rapid advance of the entire force up the main read and railread and commanded it by their guns.

"I at once advanced Gen. Foster's brigade to take possession of the town by means of the naval vessels, which Com. Rowan had kindly volunteered for the purpose. The city was set on fire by the retreating rebels in many places, but, owing to the exertions of the naval officers, the remaining citizens were induced to aid in extinguishing the flames, so that but little harm

REV. S. DIEFENDORF, D.D., Principal, THE BOARD OF COLPORTAGE would respectfully inform the readers of the Banner, that in addition to the valuable books previously advertised they have on hand THE SOLDIER'S LIBRARY, published that in addition to the valuable books previously soverused, they have on hand THE SOLDIER'S LIBRARY, published by the Presbyterian Board, containing 70 volumes; THE SOLDIER'S POCKET-BOOK, CROMWELL'S BIBLE, and a good selection of Books and Tracts suited to Soldiers and Sailors, from diffrient publishing houses in the Eastern cities. Through the benevolence of congregations and individuals, as noticed in this and last month's Banner, we have been enabled to send a large amount of religious reading matter to different camps, and the gratitude with which the enger soldiers and sailors, particularly the Germans, have received these works, would cheer the hearts of every donor, if known. We appeal to other congregations to send in their contributions, and thus embrace the present opportunity to occupy a vast missionary field among our own fellow-citizens, never before laid open to them.

The singing of the children is now universally admitted ito be one of the most attractive and interesting exercises of the Sabbath School, and the importance of a good musical anarument in this connexion will hardly be called in questions.

instrument in this connexion will hardly be called in question.

Heretofore a great lack has existed of a really good instrument for Sabbath School purposes, at a low price. The SCHOOL HARMONIUM has been especially designed to meet this owner. The moderate amount necessary for its purchase could hardly be spent to so good purpose in any other way in permanently increasing the attractiveness and unsefulness of the School. The purchase money can generally be raised by an appeal to the children themselves.

There y Sabbath School on the to have a School-Harmonium. Every Village church (which cannot afford the larger Organ Harmonium), should be farmished with a School-Harmonium.
