PITTSBURGH, JUNE 7, 1862.

The War. Last week we noted the reverse which our arms experienced in the valley of the Shenandoah. The affair was exceedingly mortifying. The enemy had been retreating before Gen. Banks, and evidently aiming at a junction with his forces at Gordonsville and Richmond. This induced Secretary Stanton to check the direct pursuit by Gen. Banks, and to order Shields' division of Banks army to Gen. McDowell, at Fredericksburg, and Geary's Brigade to move toward Manassas. Banks' force was thus reduced to about five thousand. The enemy soon learned this state of affairs, and Gen. Ewell, who had been threatening McDowell, took the back track, and joined made a dash on our lines, defeating our giving to Gen. M'Clellan all Eastern and forces at Front Royal, and driving them from Winchester, and out of the whole valley. Banks crossed the Potomac at Williamsport, before he halted. His retreat in the presence of a foe so vastly suwas considered as an able display of Gen- States and Territories : eralship.

a day or two, intense. The dispatches from New-York and Pennsylvania, the War Department to the Governors of of States, calling for troops, show that some great folks, as well as soldiers, can get into a panic. The responses were prompt, tendering tens of thousands. But the order or Union, stood as follows: was soon countermanded, in part, and not victory, they were met by the trained troops of Heintzelman and Sumner, whose unyielding colmns checked their fierce assault, turning the tide of battle every where against them, and forcing them at the point of the bayonet on toward Richmond. It was their turn now to break and run, and their losses of the Sabbath left them little cause for rejoicing over the trifling gain of Saturday

Terribly did the rebels suffer on this as well as the previous day, from the well directed fire of our artillery, piling the ground with the slain. Terrible also to them were the frequent charges of our solid columns, pressing them back, step by step, to the last point of endurance, when they broke and ran ingloriously, leaving behind them many of their officers as well as pri-vates, prisoners in our hands. place. Thus the long-talked-of great battle was only a few severe skirmishes and reconnoissances. True,

"He that fights and runs away, May live to fight another day;"

but still we rejoice in bloodless victories. The enemy is becoming rapidly exhausted. He has wasted a vast amount of his reresources at Corinth; life, courage, labor, arms, ammunition, provisions. At this as the world never before saw, have been and issued under the auspices of the War Derate he must soon fail utterly.

AT NEW ORLEANS Gen. Butler finds livered her whole broadside, making no something to do, but he seems to be doing more impression on her than if we were it well. The Mayor and other officials are compelled to respect the United States authority, and strict order is preserved. The most serious difficulty has been with the foreign Consuls. A Mr. Conturie, Consul ashore and abandoned her. She has been of the Netherlands, had $800,000 of the money stolen from the United States Mint, by the Confederates, last Spring. This was taken possession of by Gen. Butler. The Consul protested, and was joined by getting to sea, the whole American navy the British, French, Spanish, and other Consuls, to the number of eighteen. Gen. Butler was firm, and the matter goes to Washington for settlement.
