"Looking through a spy-glass about," said Mary Osborne, "and see if he could discover his enemy, and if he could find out what they were doing."

Miscellaneous.

Pennsylvania and New-England.
A writer in the Continental Monthly has made long a very able comparison of the relative progress of Pennsylvania and Virginia since the formation of the Federal Union.

These figures speak rather better than the comparison with Virginia, because New-England is far more intelligent and progressive in every respect than the Old Dominion.

When we consider the advantages possessed by New-England, these figures are truly surprising. The census tables of 1860 for education have not yet been published, and hence we cannot give any facts on that subject; and the same may be said of the religious statistics.

Waiting for Fruit.
It was James's birthday. He was twelve years old. His sister had made him a party purse, and his mother had given him a four-bladed knife, with a small silver plate on the handle, and his initials marked on it.

FOR THE YOUNG.
"Now, Miss Osborne," said Johnny, "you tell me a story as we are walking along."

Thus, while we are fast overtaking them in the number of acres of improved land, the cash value of our farms is far greater, and the difference between us increasing constantly.
