The reports of a want of food in the South, were, in times past, without foundation. Now, we think, they are founded on reality. Large numbers of cattle were brought from beyond the Mississippi. The fall of Vicksburg and Port Hudson stopped that business. East Tennessee furnished both cattle and grain in large quantities. This is now made to cease. Other places furnish pork and corn sufficiently; but beef and wheat are becoming scarce. And the want of food is felt the more from the fact that negroes to the extent, as is ford County, Pa. said, of 1,000,000 were run from the border States and Tennessee, into Georgia, for safety. These must be fed.

The starving of our prisoners proceeds no doubt, from a real scarcity of food. Their own army must and will be fed.

DIED—At the hospital, Washington, D. C., November 2d, 1863, Mr. WINFIELD S. DAVIS, f Co. B, 18th Reg't Pa. Cav., son of Philip and Esther Davis, of Elderton, Armstrong Co., Pa., aged 25 years, 2 months. and 27 days.

DIED-On Sabbath morning, October 4th, at the U.S. Army Hospital, Annapolis, Md., Serg't MARTIN ARMSTRONG, in the 35th year of

The deceased was born in Chester County, Pa. He was for several years a successful teacher in this and Lancaster counties. It was his mother's dying wish that he should be a minister of the Gospel. He attended Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg, during one session, and was converted under the preaching of Rev. Robert Johnston. He and the writer met as strangers at Washington, Pa., in May, 1853, both having entered College at that time. They were com-mates and bosom friends for more than three years. After graduating in 1856, he immediately began teaching in Dr. Foote's Academy, at Romney, Va. Here he continued his labors with entire acceptance for two years. He next taught a large and flourishing Classical School at Elizabethtown, Ky. His next position was as Tutor in a family in the State of Louisiana. He entered, in 1860, the Junior Class in the Western Theological Seminary, having previously been taken under the care of the Presbytery of Washington. He continued at the Seminary, beloved by all who became acquainted with him, until October 1861, when he enlisted in the Sixth Regular Cavalry, which has been connected with the Army of the Potomac, and taken part in all its wanderings, fatiguing marches, and hard fought battles. Sergeant Armstrong was severely wounded at Williamsburg, Va., May 4th, 1862. He returned again to his regiment in the following July, and remained at his post of duty till the battle of Fairfield, Pa., July 3d, 1863, when he was taken prisoner and sent to Richmond. After being well nigh starved, he was at length exchanged and brought to Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md. Here he remained till September 20th, when he was sent to the hospital, complaining of neuralgic pain in the old wound, and on the same day had severe chill, followed by typhoid fever. On the 2d of October he began to sink rapidly, and died on the morning of the 4th.

The writer was first informed of his death by letter from the Hospital Steward, who had found a request in his Testament, that, should he die in the hospital or on the field of battle, his old College friend should be informed of the fact. The Steward says: "Two days before he died. I tried to find out some of his relatives; but he said he had no friends he wished to write to, or have informed of his sickness, or death in case he should die; and the only way I found your name and address, was by examining his Testament. Every one who became acquainted with him here, loved him as a brother. * * * He was an excellent man and a Christian, and endured all his sufferings with a Christian fortitude seldom known. He was buried at Ash Grove Cemetery, (Soldiers' Burial Ground,) two miles from this place." J. H. S. DIED—Of apoplexy, on Sabbath morning, October 25th, 1868; in the 62d year of her age, MARY, wife of Rev. John Stark, of Armstrong

THE YOUNG PARSON. This work is the production of a gifted young clergyman, and is founded upon his own experience in his first settlement, and it possesses many of the first elements of popularity; it is original, witty, full of life and interest, in many traits profoundly truthful and touching, and calculated to enourage and forewarn the Young Pastor, as well as rebuke the troublesome classes of persons to be found in every though.

RICHARD NEWTON, D.D., says of it: "I have read The Young Parson; with unusual interest. It abounds with life-like sketches. There is a rich vein of genuine humor pervading it, mingled with deep and touching pathos. At the same time it illustrates and unfolds the precious, life-giving truths of the Gospel with clearness, discrimination and power. It is a most enjoyable book. "The book deserves a wide circulation."—Christian Intelligence."

"An exceedingly attractive volume. The author is a master hand at delineating character."—Ref. Presbyterian.
"One of the principal charms of the book is its fidelity to nature. The humor, of which the book has its full share, is cich and refined, while its pathos is so touching as frequently to moisten the eye with a tear. The religious tendency of the volume is unexceptionable."—The Evangelist. no volume is unexceptionion.——The Evangetist.

"The writer may safely put his name on the title page, with the confidence of having written one of the truest and nost amusing books of the year."—The Press.
