She bore her last illness with great patience and resignation. The consolations of religion, and the sustaining grace of God, were in a comfortable degree granted her. She was cheered and supported as she went down into the dark valley, by the hope of a better resur-rection, having a desire to "depart and be with Christ, which is far better." She was kind and affectionate in the various relations of daughter wife, sister, mother, and friend. In the full possession and clear exercise of her mental powers, she calmly, and without a struggle, closed her eyes in death. Her corpse was brought to her house, in Bridgeville, where the funeral service was performed, and then conveyed to Bethany church, where sleeps the dust of herfather, mother, husband, and other relatives. She is gone-friends mourn ; but they "sorrow not as those without hope." "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." W. J. great comfort he had in reading the Scriptures, and adds, "What a blessed thing it is to have a hope in Christ in an hour like this !" After renaining in the hospital for a long time, he so far recovered his strength as to be able to be brought to die in the home of his childhood, surrounded by his friends. A short time before he died, he was asked by the writer if he still had clear and comforting views in regard to his fu-ture prospects. He replied: "I not only feel comfortable and happy, but I enjoy a peace that cannot be described; it must be felt to be realdied, he was asked by the writer if he still had ized." Thus he passed away in the triumphs of The Way Home.
