And a choice specimen of rhetoric suc as that in which the True Presbyterian abounds, is found in the delineation given of Judge STRONG. We would not defile our columns with it, were it not necessar that we may exhibit the disposition and aims of a certain class of men who would rejoice at the downfall of our country and the overthrow of our Church. Surely such language is rather the raving of a madman than the utterances of one in the posses sion of reason and conscience. After giv ing his version of the history of the case he says :

"Such is the history of this infamou case as it came before the Assembly-evi dently the whole of it the work of one un scrupulous man, endeavoring to work ou the threat or prediction made at the As sembly of 1862. Of this man, elder STRONG, we know absolutely nothing be yond what appears in the published ac counts of this case ; nor, were we less ignorant, have we space to waste on such as he He is plainly another of the too numerous instances of men called, through haste or carelessness, into the Eldership, on whom neither nature, grace, nor education has bestowed a single qualification for the office. His relation to Presbyterianism and knowl edge of it, is obviously about equivalent to the knowledge of, and relation to, prophecy of Baalam's ass, which, in the ups and downs of asinine life, happened to fall into the hands of a prophet. It would be injustice to the ass, however, to compare the logical ability which led even Baalam to reflection, with the illogical stupidity which signalizes all the reasonings of this Elder when the rights and duties of Pastor, Elders and people are the subject. We infer from the whole history that Mr. STRONG is probably a pettifogger by profession, and a Yankee of low instincts by birth, or, at least, by religious training. His mind is utterly incapable of comprehending the idea of a Christ-appointed order in his Church, or any constitution and law but the law of the strongest. His conscience seems utterly callous to any impression of the sinfulness of covenant-breaking, chicanery, faithlessness and falsehood. His impurturbable self-complacency is impervious alike to shame from indelicacy and dishon or, or to ridicule from the perpetual blunders into which headlong stupidity ever hurries him, so long as the strong arm of military power protects him from the consequences alike of his blunders and his dishonorable deeds. It is from among men of his constitution, only with a less vivid sense of the inexpediency of crime, that the State prison and the gallows gather their

Port Hudson had proved the grave of thousands of our brave soldiers, and those strong positions were pronounced by the rebels as impregnable as Richmond and Petersburg are now said to be: whilst LEE was threat ening Washington, Baltimore, and Phila delphia, and our own citizens were busy in throwing up defences around Pittsburgh. Let the faint-hearted compare the present with the posture of things one year ago, and take courage. But our object at present is not to dis ouss these alleged disheartening circumstances, nor to attempt to deprive them of whatever significance they may justly possess. On the contrary, should the aspect of affairs become more unpromising stillshould GRANT and SHERMAN be defeated and forced to a disastrous retreat, (though of this we entertain no apprehension,)should another call be made for half a million of men to sustain the sinking arms of our country-what then? It is not philo sophical to expect uninterrupted success: and even if, at the outset, we did not grasp the magnitude of the contest in which we were involved, yet now, after the tuition of three years of strife, we should learn to contomplate and be prepared for the possible contingencies of the conflict. In the event, therefore, of such disaster as we have supposed-what then?

We might refer, in support of the continuance of the struggle, to the vast expenditure of the resources of the country alseady made-to the unparalleled contributions of a patriotic people-to the immense debt accumulated for our posterity to pay-and ask-shall we consent that all this treasure should be lavished in vain?

We might refer to the far more precious expenditure of life in this deadly struggle -to the blood which has been so loyally poured forth to cement this Union-to the sufferings which no arithmetic can estimate. endured in defence of the life of our Government and the liberty of our people so cruelly assailed-and ask-shall we consent that all these sufferings should be endured, this blood be shed, these lives be offered up, in vain?

But we forbear all such appeals. If our course has been a wrong one in prosecuting this war, we should cease that wrong at once, however fearful and irretrievable the consequences of our fault have been. We should not augment and aggravate them by continuance in the crime.

On the other hand, if our cause is indeed a righteous one, as we are persuaded that it is-if it was indeed our duty to take up arms in defence of the Government bequeathed to us-if we have felt that, in solemn supplication, we could ask God, to whom we appeal in battle, to crown our arms with victory-then, however disasters may thicken around us, however dark the immediate prospect at any time may be, our course is plain. Relying still upon that God who is chastening us, confessing and forsaking our sins, and humbly seeking his favor, it is for us to persevere, with confirmed resolution and with increased efforts; if defeated, to renew the conflict, cast down-but not destroyed, faint-yet pursuing.

We would, however, be doing injustic victims." which they treat. His pastoral life was

THE "COUNTRY PARSON."

The esteem felt by our readers for the 'Country Parson," whose genial wit and Christian spirit have procured him so many admirers in this country, will lead them to regard with interest anything from his pen. To the kindness of our townsman, A. W. FOSTER, Esq, we owe the opportunity of presenting the following brief, but expressive epistle from the distinguished essayist. We regret that the cause assigned seems to preclude the hope of his indulging in any recreations" on this side the Atlantic : "78 GREAT KING STREET, EDINBURGH,) "April 23, 1864.

"DEAR SIR :--- I should sooner have acknowledged your kind letter, but have been extremely busy. "I am very happy to think how many unknown friends I have in America. But for sea-sickness, I should go over and put down the wickedest and most causeless rebellion this world ever saw; and I lament, bitterly and indignantly, that so many people here will not see the cause rightly. so I know well the district from which your grandfather went. * * * * Believe me, in haste, Yours very sincerely. "А. К. Н. Воур."

THE BANNEB FOR MINISTERS IN WANT

Hardly a week passes that we do no learn of some of our excellent brethren in the ministry who are sorely pressed for the necessaries of life. Many of them have had no additions to salaries too low in former times, while everything they or their families eat, wear, or read, has increased vastly in price. Many of these brethren are denying themselves in ways most painful to contemplate. Not a few of them are altogether unable to pay even for their weekly religious newspaper. We are now sending the Banner to as many of these without pay, as we are able to afford. Some of our readers would do a great kindness by placing at our disposal a few dollars for furnishing the Banner to ministers in want.

Death of the Rev. A. G. Fairchild, D.D.-The Rev. A. G. FAIRCHILD, D.D., of the Presbytery of Redstone, died at his residence near Smithfield, Pa., June 30th, at 11 o'clock and 50 minutes P. M. He was one of the oldest and most widely known ministers in Western Pennsylvania. As a writer he had a high reputation throughout the Church. His books entitled "The last, we received fifteen into the church on examination, and some others are inquiring the way of salvation. Our Sabbath School is the largest and most flourishing we have ever had since the organization of the church, and the church has grown more rapidly during this year by at least two fold, than it had done in the same length of time for the last four years. We feel greatly encouraged by this and other indications of prosperity, especially in these times of spiritual dearth."

Rev. John Moore has resigned his pastoral charge at Williamsburg, Blair county, Pa.; and having taken charge of the Mantua Female Seminary in West Philadelphia, formerly under care of the Rev. Dr. McCluskey, correspondents will please address him accordingly.

The degree of D.D. has been conferred on Rev. W. P. Breed, of Philadelphia, by shake hands with some of them. My heart | Columbia College, N. > Some time ago we took from a cotempo rary a statement that the Rev. E. L. Belden had accepted a call to Fairfield, Iowa This seems to have been a mistake. A private letter of June 27 says: "Brother Belden is supplying the church at Mt Pleasant, Iowa, and a very pleasant place it is, with a promising church. The town is surrounded with a good farming country which cannot probably be excelled in the State. The Insane Asylum is located a Mt. Pleasant, in a beautiful situation about half a mile from town. It is conducted upon scientific principles, and every de partment and ward is kept in the mos cleanly manner possible. There are about one hundred and sixty patients in the Institution at present."

New School .- This branch of the Presby terian Church is profiting largely, in Missouri from the sympathy of some of the ministers of the Old School in that State, with the rebellion. Some ministers have left the Old School and united with the New. Several churches have done likewise, while new churches have been formed in different places out of Old School churches, for the cause alleged above. The Evangelist says : Quite large additions on profession, doubtless fruits of the late revival, were received into two of our Newark churches on Sabbath last. Christian Commission.—The following paper was adopted in reference to this subiect:

Resolved, That this Presbytery heartily endorse the U. S. Christian. Commission, and recommend it to the churches under our care for their liberality.
