The subject of this notice was a young man of faultless moral character. As a son, he was eminently respectful, dutiful, and thoughtful. As a brother, he was tenderly affectionate, kind, and obliging. In society, he was genial, modest, and unobtrusive. In his worldly business, he was diligent, energetic, and successful. He had not publicly professed faith in Christ, but had reverently studied the doctrines of the Gospel, and, so far as known to the writer, had endeavored daily to practice its precepts. While bath ing in the river, in company with others, he was, may add, that the bereaved father of the deceased—who is a Captain in the 115th Reg't O. V. Where N E W F A L L G O O D S others would nurse anger and harbor resent-ment, he would meet with a smile. An affectionate husband and tender father, he was ever mindful of the happiness of his family. He encouraged his wife in all her efforts to train their children in the tear of God, and was more and more in the habit of being with them in the house of God. It is with a tender interest that his wife now thinks of the different incidents going to show that he was beginning to take a personal interest in eternal things-of his re peated desire to join her in her seasons of devotion; of their last precious Sabbath evening; of his request to read to him the obituary notices of two friends; of his solemn remark that we should all be prepared for death; of the interest that he manifested in the incidents that she read to him out of the lives of the patriarchs The next day he was stricken down. Now that he is gone, his loved ones feel that these inci-dents show his inward estimate of the religion of Jesus. It is to be hoped that his little children, as they increase in years, will learn to love that Saviour, of whose infinite worth their lamented father was persuaded, and whose salvation he endeavored to place within their reach. His sudden and untimely death should lead us all to ponder well our latter end. To use one of his last thoughtful remarks, "We should at all times be prepared for death."

It is with heartfelt sorrow we record the death of this Christian patriot. In early years he was take me up." He found a happy home in the family of a loving and tenderly-attached sister. In the season of ripening youth, he publicly professed Christ, in the church of Leatherwood. Cherishing an ardent patriotism, he enlisted in the service of his country in August, 1862. Through many battles he passed unharmed, gallantly performing his duty, till at last, in a fearlantly performing his duty, till at last, in a fearful charge, he was wounded in the arm, and on a ball causing instant death. Thus he was

been to consult at every step the convenience of the beacher and the progress of the pupil; to make, in fine, a useful a full account of the visit of the Rev. Dr. Col. Ja-quess, and Edmund Kirk, to Richmond, in which starting to the rear, was pierced in the body by called from the shock of battle to receive, as we trust, the conqueror's crown.

As a companion, he was a general favorite. By his amiable and highly social disposition, he Godey's Lady's Book, for September, will be endeared himself to all his acquaintances. As a soldier, his conduct is his best memorial. His fast. The same cheerful hope, the same lofty patriotism, the same devoted energy that first characterized his enlistment, marked his whole career. As a Christian, he was truly exem-plary. His record is on high. We love to think f him as the unostentatious soldier of the cross. His comrades mourn the loss of a brave patriot. His messmates feel the want of his watchful care. The companions of his youth mourn his death. The church of which he was member laments the loss of his influence. His astor, now a chaplain in the army, on returning, will miss his cordial greeting and words of Christian affection. Brothers and sisters are deeply afflicted. The hearts of little nephews and nieces are saddened, and their footfalls hushed, as they learn that "Uncle Calvin" will come home no more. He now rests from his warfare. His work is done. His duty to his country is nobly per-formed. We cherish the sweet hope that the weapons of his earthly warfare are exchanged for the white robe and starry crown. & Rest, soldier, rest; thy warfare o'er, The battle roll thou 'It hear no more: Thy duty bravely, nobly done,

The conflict's past, the victory's won." DIED-June 27th, 1864, JOHN JAMIESON, Co. B, 98th Reg't Ohio Volunteers.

.The noble boy whose name is above announced and whose mortal remains lie in Northern Georgia, deserves more at our hands than the mer recital of his fall. He was born in Indiana County, Pa., May 26th, 1842. His family removed to Jefferson County, O, in the Spring of 1860. He connected himself with the U. P. church in Blairsville, Pa., in his 17th year. Rev. Mr. Conner was the pastor. When the voice of his country called her sons to arouse and gird on the sword, he was diligently and successfully prosecuting a regular course of study at New Athens, Ohio, preparatory to the work of the Gospel ministry, to which he had been called, as he felt, of God, and for which he seemed to be peculiarly fitted. He regarded the call of the country the call of duty, and laying aside his books, having first obtained the consent of a widowed mother, who looked upon him as the solace and comfort of her declining years, he responded by enlisting in Co. B of the 98th Ohio. That was a sad parting between that fond mother, and her loving boy. But both were sustained by a sense of duty and an unfaltering trust in a covenant God. He became in time a member of the Army of the Cumberland. He participated in all its faigues, privations, and battles. He was never in the hospital, nor was he ever off duty but for a few days at one time. He bore all the vicis-situdes of the camp, and march, and field, with the heroic firmness, and untiring patience, and unmurmuring endurance that so largely characterize our brave men, and that so well became the Christian soldier. He was always at the post of duty and ready for every emergency. He won and retained the love and confidence of both officers and privates—his comrades in ceived his dea o'clock in the forencon of Monday, the 27th, during a charge made oy our regiment upon some rebel breastworks, and lingered until 2 o'clock in the aftern on, when he expired. His death was caused by a musket ball passing directly through the bowels. His remains were decently interred by his comrades in a shady grove, and the grave marked with his name, company, and regiment, so that it could easily be recognized. John was a brave and faithful soldier, and met his death doing his duty. He was beloved by every one, and his death has cast a gloom over all. Although your loss is irreparable, you have the consolation of knowing that he sacrificed his life in the cause of justice and truth. The officers and men of the company tender to you their heartfelt sympathy in your great affliction." Thus wrote his Captain to his mother. He needs no other eulogy than these How sweetly and sacredly came to that stricken mother, in this sad bereavement, in this blasting of her hopes and this withering of her joys, these testimonies of his fellow-soldiers to his faithfulness and merit. But there is higher, holier consolation far. John was prepared fo death. In the last letter he ever wrote to his mother, under date of June 7th, he said: "I pray daily, and if I fall I have hope of meeting father and mother, brothers and sisters, in heaven. His last message, whispered in the ears of attendant, sorrowing companions, was: "Tell my mother I tried to do my duty to my country, and that I was prepared to die." And thus, in the assured hope of a glorious immortality, amidst the din of battle, he passed away to meet the loved ones gone before, to join the triumphant hosts of the redeemed, and to be at peace forever with the Lord. Whilst we deeply sympathize with surviving friends, yet, in viewing all the circumstances of this case we cannot but say, Happy, happy boy! "Lo, the pain of life is past, All his warfare now is o'er:

Death and hell behind are cast, Grief and suffering are no more. Yes, the Christian course is run, Ended is the glorious strife :-. Fought the fight, the work is done, Death is swallowed up of life!"

DIED-July 25th, 1864, at her residence in SEWING MACHINES. Plum Creek Township, Armstrong County, Pa., Mrs. MARY JANE, wife of Joseph Stewart, in the 62d year of her age.

MASON & HAMLIN'S CABINET ORCANS.

CAUTION TO PURCHASERS. The wide demand for our CABINET ORGANS has induced dealers in some cases to advertise quits different in struments as CABINET ORGANS, and in others to represent to purchasers that Harmoniums and other red organs are the same thing. This is not true. The excellences of which have given them their high reputation, arise not merely from the Superiority of their workmanship, but also, in large measure from ESERWILL DIFFERENCES IN CONSTRUC-TION, which being patented BY US, cannot be imitated by other makers. From these arise their better quality and volume of tone, and capacity for expression. Every CABI-NET ORGAN has upon its name board in full, the words, "MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGAN." When a dealer represents any other instrument as a Cabi-luct Organ, it is usually a mere attempt to sell an inferior instrument on which he can make a larger profit. Prices of
