Buying these plants can help dig a well

The houseplants in the photo above are part of the plant collection of Mrs. Paul S. Heistand of Marietta R.D. 1. Mrs. Heistand is selling plants to raise money for a small village in the Dominican Republic. Kathy and Ed Brainherd, Mrs. Heistand's daughter and son-in-law, do missionary work in the village. The money Mrs. Heistand raises will be used to dig a well for irrigation. The village is in a low rainfall area, and the people often can't raise crops in the dry ground. The infant death rate is 60 percent. People who want plants can stop at Mrs. Heistand's home on Bainbridge Road near the intersection with Donegal Springs Road. There is a sign out front that reads, 'House Plants'.

E-town library movies

The Elizabethtown Public Library has announced a series of films to celebrate the nation's Bicentennial recently. To be shown Tuesday nights at 7:00, the films will trace the nation's history through the last two hundred years. The series, started on January 13, will continue for a ten-month period, ending on October 19. The highlight of the program promises to be the thirteen-episode series, "America," written and narrated by Alistair Cooke. Designed to cover the history of the nation from its founding to the present the film series provides a quick and entertaining review of the major events and personalities important to America. Librarian Susan Bowser has remarked about the films, "What more appropriate way to celebrate the Bicentennial than by renewing our knowledge of our nation's past?" The films will be held at the Elizabethtown Public Library. Admission to the films shown at the Library, corner of North Hanover and Oak Streets is free.
