Sandy Geesey, Terri Smoker, Chris Swab, Amy Winters enter Reading Hall of Fame

by Linda Boozer

Sandy Geesey, Chris Swab, Terri Smoker, and Amy Winters, all from Mrs. Kegel's third grade at Maytown, achieved the Reading Hall of Fame Award.

They read over thirty books and completed all the activities required for the level they began in September.

The purpose of the Project DARE is to help children rediscover the pleasures of personal reading.

For now their efforts are being rewarded with certificates of achievement and public recognition. Their teachers believe that, once children become really involved with books, personal rewards will come to them throughout their lives.

Five awards, out of a total of nine in the district, have gone to students in Mrs. Kegel's room.

She devotes fifteen minutes each morning to personal reading.

Each child keeps his own records, and Mrs. Kegel files them along with their activities on special cards.

The children also are guided and encouraged toward creative book-related projects.

Dawn Drager wins 2nd award

by Linda Boozer

Dawn Drager recently completed the requirements for her second award in the DARE project. She is a student in Mr. Rupp's sixth grade at Maytown.

The original instructions for the project stated that each child should choose 1 award and aim for that goal. But, Dawn decided she could get all three.

She has now read over 55 books in at least 5 different categories. A comprehensive form was carefully completed for each book, many of which contained over 200 pages.

Dawn has now won the second highest award: The Avid Reader's Club Award.

Mrs. Turnpaugh teaches reading in her home

Mrs. Turnpaugh got interested in the DARE reading program at Riverview Elementary School, where she works as a volunteer.

She decided to start an after-school class in her home, to give kids extra time to work on their reading projects.

Mrs. Turnpaugh is enthusiastic about the project. "I've really seen the kids come alive to the reading," she says.

Students in the home-study class read books, write reports, have discussions and make projects. All of them hope to reach the highest goal in the DARE program—the Reading Hall of Fame.
