Ladies make red roses for the ball

by Hazel Baker

Mrs. J. H. Brown taught residents of Maytown, East Donegal and Marietta to make red roses from tissue paper at a workshop in the Marietta Community House last week.

The roses will be used to decorate the Riverview Elementary school, the site of the Bi-centennial Ball on April 24, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The theme of the occasion is "Red Roses." The group plans to complete 15,000 roses for the event.

The cafetorium will resemble a red rose garden with a pool in the center circled with garden furniture. Rose circlets will hang from the ceiling and a huge red rose ball will be in the center. Ten foot trellises will be placed along the walls and rose topiary trees will be placed spasmodically by the dance floor.

A buffet supper will be served at midnight and period music will be provided by the Dixielanders. A "Grand March" with costumed participants will be a highlight of the evening. Persons wearing authentic dress will be judged. Winners will receive red rose bushes as prizes.

Corky Flick shows Riverview kids how a camera's shutter works. Some of the kids look fascinated. Most look interested. One definitely wants a non-photographic career. Even those who appreciated the art of photography got zapped by Corky's new electronic flash.

Susquehanna Times photographer Corky Flick explained how cameras work to two classes at Riverview Elementary School last week.

Corky's demonstration was part of a career education project in Mr. Jay Kaylor's 4th grade and Mrs. June Riley's 6th grade.

The purpose of the project is to acquaint students with jobs available in the community.

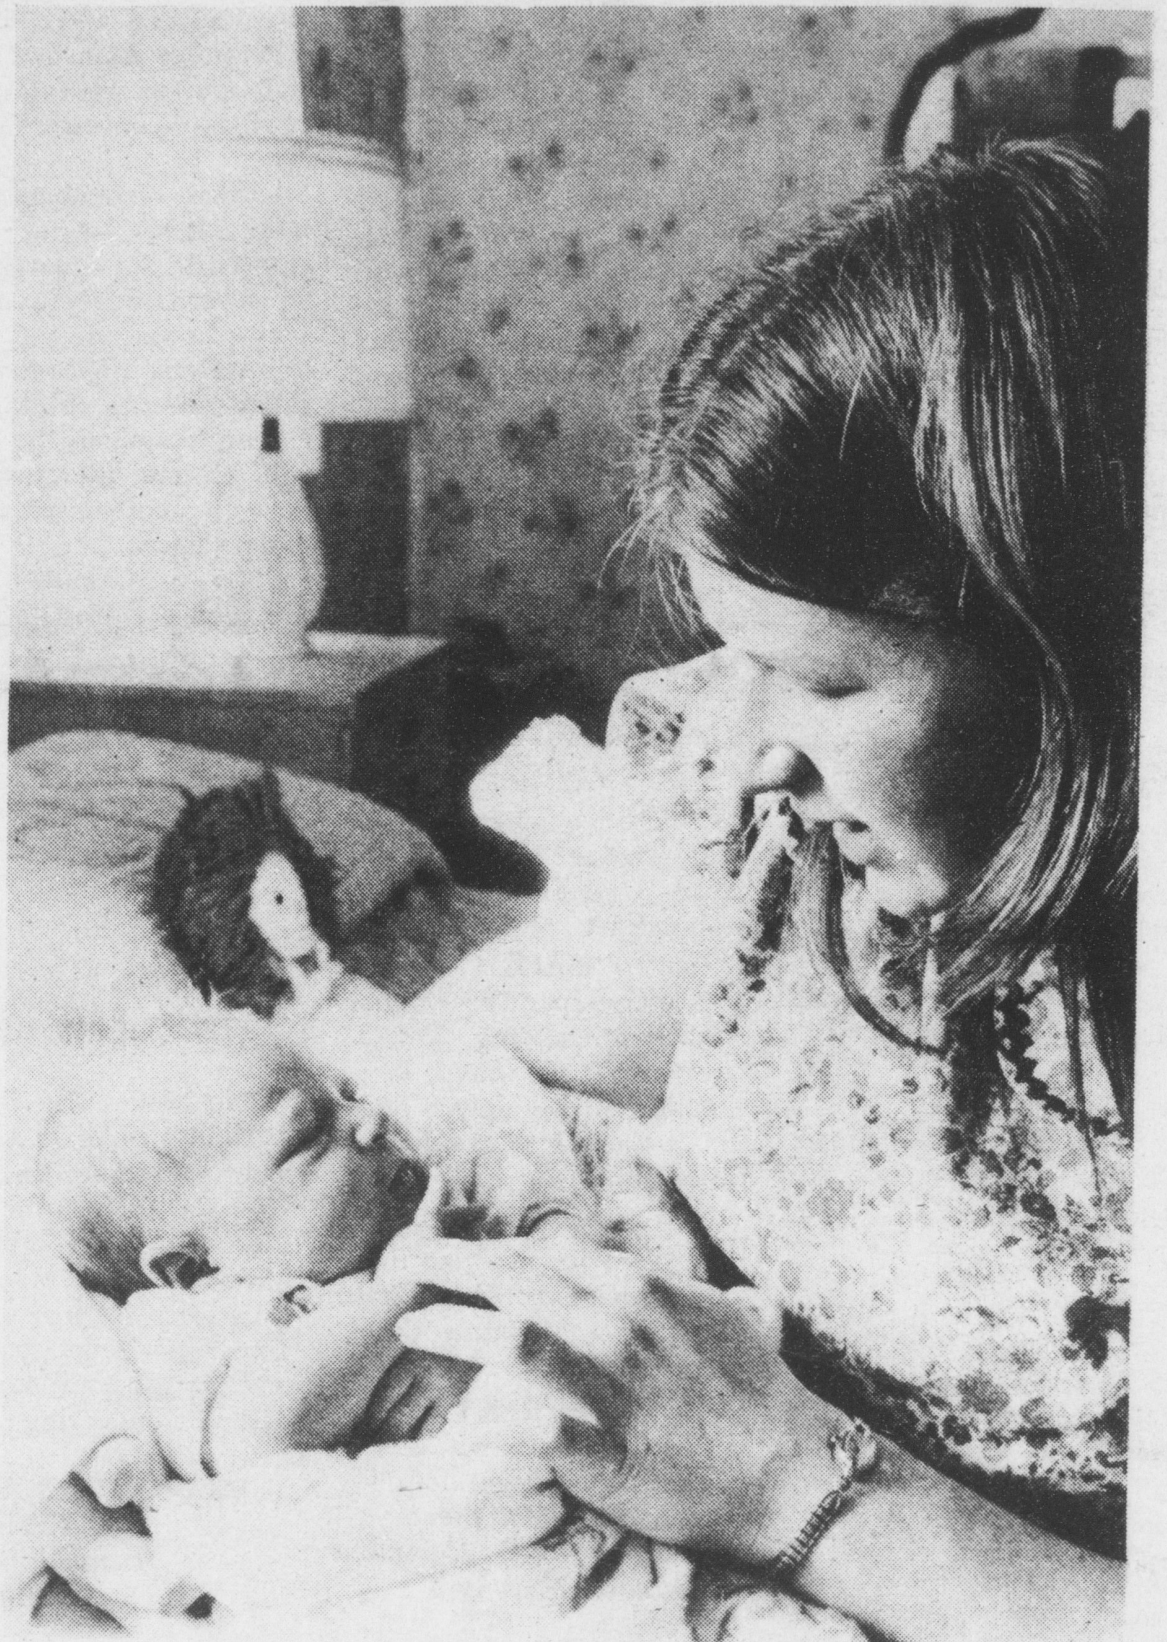

People who work in the local area will be invited to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of their jobs with the students.

As part of their photography career project, the classes took photos, brought baby pictures to class and listened to Corky.

Corky, a student at Donegal High School, does free-lance photography in addition to his work at the Susquehanna Times. His photograph of a young bird won a prize from the Kodak company. He also lends a lot of photographic time and skill to the high school year book committee.
