

Vo-Tech students learn about the inside of a car

Students in the auto maintenance at Mount Joy Vo-tech don't practice their trade. They work at it. Teacher William Fritsch thinks the best way to become a mechanic is to fix cars. Anybody whose car needs work can arrange to have it fixed at Mount Joy Vo-tech. There is no charge for labor, and the students will fix anything except automatic transmissions, air conditioning, and foreign cars. Photo shows students Andy Haines (left) and Charles Kreider (right) learning to fix somebody's engine.
