Old Dick Bromer had some cows

"Doctor Dick" Bromer, R.D.#1, Marietta, had a little trouble (again) with his livestock last week.

On Saturday, June 5, six little black heifers which had just been delivered to Bromer's farm, broke through an electric fence around his pasture and took off across the countryside.

With the help of numerous neighbors over a period of five days, all the run-aways were returned to Bromer. The animals were trapped where they tried to join the herds of Harry Aungst, Don Mowrer, and Irwin Engle. Aungst, Mowrer, and Engle separated the heifers from their herds and returned them to Bromer.

(Oscar Leas permitted Bromer to tie up one of the first captured animals in Leas' barnyard as a lure to those still at large then.)

All six are presently secure in Bromer's barnyard, where they are getting slowly conditioned to an electric wire.

Bromer is also completing putting up a woven fence around his entire pasture.

(Three years ago seventeen young Holstein bulls broke through the electric wire around Bromer's place and ran two miles toward Maytown. A dozen neighbors assisted him then in herding the bulls back to the barn.)
