

James Buchanan as an ambitious young lawyer.

...tragic romance

After the dance, Buchanan tried to return the gloves, but he accidentally left one glove in his pocket.

Buchanan took Ann home from the dance. On her doorstep, he reached into his coat pocket for a handkerchief, and pulled out the other girl's long white glove.

Ann accused him of having an affair with other girls. They had a bitter quarrel over this.

Ann's father was upstairs listening. He called to Ann, "Throw the S.O.B. out. He's not worth the powder and shot to blow him to hell and back."

Buchanan waited two days, then tried to come calling on Ann to make up, but Ann's father wouldn't let him enter the house. Buchanan's letters were returned because Ann's father read his daughter's mail.

According to Buchanan, Ann told her friends that she would have loved to marry him, but her father wouldn't let her.

Both Ann and her sister committed suicide, because their father wouldn't let them marry the men they wanted.

(Ann's sister, Sarah Coleman, died as suddenly and mysteriously as Ann. Sarah was in love with the Rev. Augustus Muhlenberg but her father forbid Muhlenberg to enter the Coleman mansion.)

According to Edna Guhl, the hostility between James Buchanan and Robert Coleman never ended. She says that, when Lincoln replaced Buchanan in the White House, the ex-president was not able to return directly to Lancaster. Buchanan's stagecoach dropped him off at Long Level, because Coleman's henchmen were waiting to attack Buchanan at the Lancaster station.

Mrs. Guhl has been a school teacher for much of her life. (She taught before her marriage and after her husband's death.)

She graduated from Stevens High School in 1911, and attended Millersville College where she majored in history. Her education was continued at many universities, and she has travelled around the world.

Mrs. Guhl taught for two years at Beahm, but was forced to "retire" at age 72. Instead of relaxing, she found a job teaching 1st grade at St. Anne's School.

Maytown, Grandview will share principal

James D. Lawrence will serve as part-time principal of Grandview Elementary School in addition to holding down his current job as principal of Maytown School. Lawrence's appointment became official at the Donegal School Board meeting last Thursday evening.

At the meeting, a letter from attorney William M. Musser informed the board members that they were within their legal rights in denying summer employment to high school guidance counselor, John Day.

Mr. Day had voiced his reservations about the termination of his summer duties at a hearing on June 17th after he and three other professional staff members were denied summer employment as an economy measure.

In other business the board also approved the following persons to fill teaching positions in the district: Ms. Sharon Green will replace Mrs. Vera Gingrich who retired as English instructor at the high school; Robert Freund will replace Susan Young for the 1976-77 school year as the high school math teacher; and Mrs. Elizabeth Baley who will take the place of Mrs. Marian Toppin who retired as kindergarten teacher at the Seiler Elementary School.

Mrs. Nancy Paden will replace Mrs. Lily Grimm as the high school guidance counselor. Mrs. Marian Heisey will supervise all elementary art.

The board received the resignation of Rick J. Topper as junior high school science teacher.

Gene H. Newcomer will be responsible for all elementary guidance throughout the district, the board decided. Mrs. M. Dorcas Knorr will take charge of elementary nursing in the district.

The insurance recommended for Donegal students by the board will be offered by Titus Rutt, local broker, through the Reserved Life Insurance Co. Primary coverage during school hours for all 13 grades will cost $5.00 for the year, up one dollar from last year. Twenty dollars will be the price for 24-hour coverage, up five dollars from 1975-76.

The school will pay $35.00 for each student on the varsity football team; five dollars more than last year's enrollment.

The board approved the selection of six doctors at the Norlanco Medical Center as medical examiners and attending physicians for the varsity football games starting in September.

The board approved transfer of Mr. William Long from position of district painter to head building custodian at Riverview Elementary School and Mr. John L. Parker, Jr., as head custodian at the high school to begin August 16, 1976.

Board members viewed a filmstrip on "School Board Duties and Responsibilities." The film will be available for use by other organizations in the district.

According to Nick Coble, Director of Public Relations, PA School Boards Associations, Inc., Harrisburg, "this 20-minute program succinctly present an overview of the local school board's duties and responsibilities, the role and relationship of the superintendent of the board, and fundamental teachings about what a school board "can do and cannot do."

Mr. Coble said a recent Gallup Poll states that the function and role of the people have a very poor understanding about the function and role of the local school board. It is the hope of the PSBA this presentation will "help close that gap" through its viewing by groups such as PTA, churches, etc.

Spinning Spokes

bers of St. John's congregation. Spinning Spokes was formed last November.

In order to prepare for the trip, members worked together on bake sales and odd jobs, such as moving Harold Ney's chickens (Kathy Hay is Harold's daughter). The total cost was only $55 per person.

The Susquehanna Times thinks that's a lot of fun per dollar.
