It was 1959 . . .

And the space race is in full swing with the United States launching its first weather satellite, the Vanguard, and picking our first seven astronauts. Alaska and Hawaii join the Union as the 49th and 50th state. The New York Giants and Baltimore Colts, playing for the football championship, engage in a memorable overtime game—won by the Colts.

The same year the Princess telephone makes its debut. "It's little, it's lovely, it's light" . . . providing a lighted dial when you lift the handset or you can turn the light on to serve you as a convenient night light.

The usefulness of the classic Princess telephone has kept it a favorite. The Princess phone is available in decorator colors of white, beige, pink, blue and turquoise.
