

Citizens ask Marietta Council to deny permit for pizza parlor

A group of citizens petitioned Borough Council to deny rezoning of a structure on Market Square for use as a pizza shop Tuesday night.

Reasons given were that a pizza shop would encourage excessive litter, loitering, noise, disrespect for property and use of alcohol.

Two brothers once operated a pizza shop at the same location but closed it down after some rental problems arose. Now that they want to open it again, they find the borough has since passed a new zoning ordinance putting them in a residential district.

Harold McElroy, chairman of the Marietta Planning Commission, read a recommendation from his group that the area not be rezoned. He said there was not enough off-street parking and that it may be included in the historical zoning.

Roger Richards explained changes necessary for the boiler in the Borough Hall, costing $680.00.

Thomas Gibble, vice president of St. Joseph Hospital board of directors, reviewed plans for the construction of a proposed medical center on Route 441 at Bank Street.

Plans call for an elevated building with surface water to be drained toward Route 441. The two-level $225,000 building would have four doctors' suites on the second floor, with the first level left vacant for expansion.

Representatives of the Marietta Recreation Association presented a plan for Maytown, Mount Joy, and Marietta to combine to form the Donegal Area Playground Association.

The group asked council to consider earmarking a sum in the budget toward future activities and to be a sponsor of the project.

Marietta Jaycees asked permission to use borough streets for its annual Halloween parade on October 28. The parade will form at Riverview Elementary School, move west on Market Street to the square, north on Gay Street to Walnut Street, east on Walnut Street to the Jaycees headquarters. Waterford Avenue would be closed to traffic for the awarding of prizes. Jaycees said they were withdrawing their community project of maintaining the square because of a problem with council over electricity.

Sakra Engineers presented plans for reconstruction of Front Street. Council will review the plans.

Council plans to advertise for garbage and trash collection and propose an additional charge for each dwelling.

Joyce Heiserman was appointed housing officer and will be given authority to initiate prosecutions with power of police, excluding arrests.

Mayor Bernard McDevitt set Saturday, October 30, as Trick or Treat Night, from 7 to 9 p.m., for ages up to 12.

In other business, council:

—Awarded the service contract and fuel oil used in borough buildings to Mike Mihalik and the gasoline contract to Sico Company.

—Announced that the borough will collect leaves if owners rake or bag them. Residents with high amounts of leaves are asked to contact the borough office for removal.

—Agreed to advertise for bids for trash and garbage collections and proposed an additional service charge for dwellings.

No action was taken on subdivision plans submitted by the Creative Community Inc. The plans were for four townhouses to be built at East Market and Clay Streets. No plans for drainage were included in the dwellings.

Mayor Jim Gingrich proclaims National BPW week in borough
