THE
"HOMETOWN BANK"

CHRISTMAS
by Chester Wittell

Above the muted tread of hurrying feet
The cold wind sharply whips the whirling snow,
As gaily up and down the glaring street
Laden with gifts the Christmas shoppers go.

Spanning the night with brilliance secular,
From curb to curb as far as eye can see,—
A silvery skein of tinsel, star on star,—
The symbols seem to mock infinity.

Somewhere a raucous organ croaks and caws,
And on a corner with his tinkling bell
A paunchy and bewhiskered Santa Claus
Anticipates the wonder of Noel.

It is a sign that we have found the dawn
Whose risen sun illumines the paynim dark?
Or but a proof of reverence withdrawn
To label Jesus with the dollar mark?

We who have faltered where the light is low
Turn to our missals, whelmed by doubt and shame
To see the lamp thus darkened and to know
That we have worshipped Mammon in His name.

And yet the error, glaring though it be,
Seems softened as well-wishing once again
Decreases acquital for the fault while we Speak our brief ode of peace on earth to men.
From "The Garden Spot."

JOYOUS CHRISTMAS

Rejoice at the Birth of the Heavenly King.
Special thanks.
