...shifters

In late 1922 or early 1923, he moved his restaurant to 400 Locust St.

There were big pictures outside the restaurant. One showed a hefty man. The picture was captioned "I eat here." The other showed a skinny man whose caption was, "I don't."

Tuffie's son, T.W. Olena, Jr., showed us a menu from his father's restaurant. Shifters were not listed on the menu (they hadn't been invented yet), but ham sandwiches sold for 5 cents each. The menu dates from around 1914.

A 1942 menu shows the effect of inflation. A ham sandwich cost 10 cents. Shifters appear on the 1942 menu. The price: 10 cents.

...fire in Marietta

Smoke and water damage were heavy, but no one was serious hurt in the fire. Jeff Lighty, Bainbridge, was taken to the Columbia Hospital for back injuries after falling from the roof. He was later discharged and again started to battle the fire. William Smith, Jr., was asleep in the house when the fire broke out, but he escaped in time. The fire was also discovered by Marietta fireman Pete Arnold, who was passing by.

The fire was probably caused by an overheated pipe.

A neighbor, Mrs. Paul Rettew, Jr., made coffee for the firefighters and provided shelter for Mrs. Smith.
