

The tug-o-war caused a lot of excitement.

The anonymous hand points to a youngster who needs another piece of pie.

Let them eat pie

Riverview Elementary kids had a field day: tugs-o-war, pie eating, mat-rolling, screaming and yelling, and hand-standing.

According to the rules, pie-eating contestants could not use their hands, only their mouths. As soon as they had scarfed one slice, they were handed another. Most of the kids only managed one in 30 seconds, but a few ate as many as three or four.

In a special event, the teachers had a tug-o-war with the kids. The teachers lost.

Correction

Last week the Times blundered again. We stuck a paragraph that was intended for the story, "Race for Mayor," into Mr. Flanagan's statement in "The candidates speak" section, at the end. We apologise to Mr. Flanagan and to our readers.

A winner raises his hand in triumph.
