Andre Watts

—famed pinaist in Lacaster soon

One of the world's great- est pianists will give a free concert on Sunday, July 3 at the Long Park amphitheater in Lancaster, Pa.

Pianist Andre Watts will be the soloist with the Lancaster Symphony Orchestra for an outdoor concert at 8 p.m.

Internationally acclaimed as one of the most talented pianists in the world today and one of the highest paid, Watts is donating his talents for the concert which is sponsored by the Lancaster Summer Arts Festival.

This will be Watts' fourth appearance with the Lancaster Symphony under the direction of Louis Vyrer. It was in Lancaster in 1957 when he was 10 years old that Watts made his debut as a soloist with a symphony orchestra.

According to Vyrer, Watts is one of the youngest concert artists to have attained such wide recognition. He has appeared 10 times on the concert stage of Lincoln Center in New York City, far more often than any other artist, and he is the youngest artist ever to receive an honorary music degree from Yale University.

Long Park provides a perfect setting for an outdoor concert with its sweep of lawn sloping gently toward the amphitheater, large enough to accommodate thousands of people comfortably if they bring their own folding chairs or blankets.

Tall shade trees and picnic tables provide space for picnicking before the concert. Plenty of free parking is available at the Park City Shopping Center directly across the highway.

The park and the shopping center are located at the intersection of route 30 and the Old Harrisburg Pike, Lancaster exit of route 30.

DID YOU HEAR...

Last week a woman walked into Shank's Tavern in Marietta. According to Bob Shank, who served her, she was "a good-looking woman wearing blue jeans and an apricot top. She came in a big Monte Carlo with two men."

"She was very friendly," Bob told us in a telephone interview. "She said that she likes Marietta and will probably come back some day."

Her name? Lauren Baccall.
