Course on art of selling crafts at F&M

A special 10-hour course on selling crafts to the public will be offered at Franklin and Marshall College in early August in conjunction with the 30th Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsman's State Craft Market Fair at F&M's Mayser Center, August 4-7.

The non-credit course, broken into four, two-and-a-half hour sessions, is open to the general public as well as members of the Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsman.

Two sections of the course are being scheduled. One will meet Thursday to Sunday, August 4-7, from 7:30 to 10 a.m., and the other will meet Wednesday to Saturday, August 3-6, from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

The classes will take place in air-conditioned Kaufman Lecture Hall in F&M's Pfeiffer Science Center.

The course will be taught by Joanne Shaub, who owns the Union Gallery in Marietta.

Topics which will be covered include preparation for selling to the public; selling through shops; business aspects of selling—paperwork and records; and marketing.

Information about the course is available from F&M's office of special programs at 291-4003.
