New reading program pioneered at Kraybill

Kraybill Mennonite School will host 30 teachers plus administrators from other schools in the area for a Teacher Training Workshop on the S.P.A. (Self-Pronouncing Alphabet) Reading System on Monday, August 22, 1977.

S.P.A. is an innovative method of teaching beginners to read that has been highly successful since it was piloted 10 years ago on the West coast. Children taught to read with S.P.A., basically a phonetic approach to reading, consistently score higher on standardized tests and read more independently than children taught with other leading systems.

Kraybill Mennonite School adopted the S.P.A.

Reading System three years ago. One of the school's teachers, Betty Hershey, will present a demonstration S.P.A. lesson at the forthcoming workshop. Her experience with S.P.A. in the classroom will be an invaluable help to teachers who are new to S.P.A.

According to Leon Good, the kindergarteners at Kraybill Mennonite School did very well with S.P.A. last year. "We like S.P.A. and plan to continue with it as a basic part of our Kindergarten curriculum," Mr. Good states. "The teachers like it, too. It is a way to learn that is fun, and all children love the animals of S.P.A."

Kraybill Mennonite School now has 200 students and offers instruction for grades Kindergarten through ninth.
