PP&L won't disconnect welfare recipients

PP&L has announced that it will not knowingly disconnect state employees and welfare recipients who have not received their checks.

Herbert Nash, PP&L vice president, says, "We're trying to balance two difficult situations. One the one hand, we have people already in bad financial straits who, through no fault of their own, now face additional hardships. On the other, we have millions of dollars in overdue bills which, if not recovered, eventually will have to be borne by customers who do pay their bills on time."

Late payment charges will not be waived, indeed cannot legally be waived. They are part of the official tariffs approved by the PUC.

By order of the PUC the grace period has been extended from 15 days to 20 days for late charges.
