

RALPH M SNYDER
R.D. 2 BOX 3040
MOUNT JOY, PA. 17552

SUSQUEHANNA TIMES

Susquehanna Times & The Mount Joy Bulletin
MARIETTA & MOUNT JOY, PA.

Vol. 77 No. 39 October 12, 1977

FIFTEEN CENTS

Corinne Frey

Classmates honor crash victim Corinne Frey

The freshman class at Donegal High dedicated their homecoming parade float to the memory of classmate Corinne Frey, 13, who was killed in a car crash on Monday of last week.

It was the kind of gesture Corinne would have helped to organize. She was an active leader in school activities: the kind of girl the whole community is proud of.

The photo above was taken at last year's May Queen contest at Beahm Jr. High. Corinne was a contestant.

This year, Corinne was a freshman at Donegal High. She was a member of the Mount Joy Mennonite Church and its youth fellowship.

Born in Lancaster, she was the daughter of Herbert B. and Lucille Hershey Frey.

In addition to her parents, she is survived by a brother, Terry L., a sister, Connie S., paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Frey, Marietta; and maternal grandfather, Jacob R. Hershey, Quarryville.

Breckline cleared

Bill Breckline

Former Marietta roads supervisor Bill Breckline, who had been charged with stealing $500 in parking meter receipts, was cleared in District Court last Thursday.

District Justice Richard Sheetz (standing in for Justice Ray Knorr, who disqualified himself) dismissed the charges against Breckline after a 3-hour preliminary hearing.

As we go to press, Marietta Council has not had an opportunity to discuss the possibility of offering to re-hire Mr. Breckline.

Bill Breckline was fired on August 22, after borough councilmen heard charges that he had stolen the parking meter receipts. The vote was 5-2 in favor of firing Breckline.

It seems almost certain that the possibility of offering Mr. Breckline his old job will come up at Tuesday night's council meeting.

According to informed sources, some councilmen were very surprised by the court's decision, and feel that a cloud of suspicion still hangs over the former roads supervisor.

The councilmen who voted against Breckline's ouster, on the other hand, may demand that he be offered his old post, now that the law has found him innocent.

[continued on page 2]

Homecoming: Indians win, take Section 3 lead Mimi Ginder is Homecoming Queen

Kim Wilkinson and her flaming batons were part of the halftime show at the Donegal-Elco game. Donegal cleaned up. Story on back page.

Historic districting official buying Marietta mansion

Charles Herrington, the Chief of Registration at the National Register of Historic Places in Washington D.C., has organized a corporation to buy Riverview Towers, a castle-like mansion at the eastern end of Marietta.

Although Mr. Herrington's office is in charge of evaluating Marietta's potential as a historic district, the corporation will be strictly a private venture. The corporation does not intend to buy other local properties, but corporation members, who may number 150 strong, are interested in buying other local properties as individuals.

Two weeks ago, Mr. Herrington and 17 friends from the Washington, D.C. area, toured Marietta with local real estate agent Jack Johnson.

Riverview Towers has been on the market at a listed value of $170,000. According to members of the corporation, a "private agreement" between the mansion's owner, Andrew Shaubach of Lancaster, and the corporation has been reached.

When the Susquehanna Times asked Mr. Shaubach to verify this information, he denied knowing anything about either Mr. Herrington or "Riverview Inc."

However, an investigation by our staff both verified Mr. Herrington's credentials and left no doubt in our minds that he is acting in good faith.

In spite of Mr. Staubach's denials to the press, papers are now being drawn up to form the corporation. Most of the members will probably be from the Washington, D.C. area, an informed source says, and there may be up to 150 members.

We interviewed Mr. Herrington two weeks ago, during his tour of Marietta with real estate agent Jack Johnson.

The group began their tour at the home of John Hinkle on East Main Street. While waiting for

Mr. Herrington to glance around the house, our reporter talked with other members of the group, who are planning to join the corporation.

One man described the group as "a small circle of friends and acquaintances who dabble in culture and the arts."

Another man, asked about Mr. Herrington, characterized him as "one of the great minds of the twentieth century."

Mr. Herrington told us that his visit had nothing to do with his official capacity as evaluator of potential historic districts, but was motivated by interest in Marietta, which he called "an area of most unique historical value."

He told us that, as Chief of Registration (the second most important position in the Preservation office), he seldom actually visits proposed Historic Districts, as there are 300 to 400 new ones each year.

[continued on page 3]