Harold Keller opens new offices

He and his family worked on new building

Harold Keller, the well-known auctioneer and real estate broker, has opened new offices in Mount Joy.

Keller's new location is 38 W. Main St., a building he recently purchased.

Mayor James Gingrich officially welcomed Keller by cutting the ribbon during the opening. Others attending the opening were the contractor, Jere Miller; M&E Associates; and Paul Miller of Dyna Electric.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Marsales, of 34 W. Main, are the offices neighbors. They recalled how their marriage took place in the office building in 1956, which at that time was rented by Mr. and Mrs. Clair Amway. Mrs. Marsales is the sister of Mr. Amway.

The new offices reflect the care the entire Keller family used in their renovations. Harold and his wife, Helen, did the papering and Helen did most of the painting. Harold said the family "put a lot of effort into the job."

He noted that the business had outgrown the former offices and that this was the answer to the problem.

Keller keeps abreast of what's new in real estate by attending seminars and courses offered by the industry. Many long hours of class and home study go into making a knowledgeable real estate broker.

Just recently Keller completed a course in the principles of land and subdivision analysis to enable him to give better service to his clients.

He has been in the business since 1961.

Jerry R. Miller, Builder, Mayor James Gingrich, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Keller cut the ribbon on the new offices of Harold Keller.
