PUFA art contest winners pose, with and without works

and Sylvia Lutz with "Bugs Having a Picnic on a Leaf," a ceramic work, again honorably mentioned.

In the bottom row, from left to right, we see Janice Rogers, 3rd place winner, with "Sunny Day in Brazil," an imaginary 3-d landscape; Vicki Fogie with "Bird of Paradise," honorable mention; Rick Kinsey and his 2nd place winner, "Tiger;" and last but not least (he won 1st prize) Jon Horst with "South Sea Sunset."

81 pieces of student artwork were included in the PUFA show.

See if you can figure this out

There has been some confusion about the change in bonus prizes and bonus numbers in the "Big 50" lottery game. Here's the scoop:

Chances of winning the new bonus prize of $2500 worth of groceries are now five times greater than

Now, instead of having to match all six digits in the bonus number to win the prize, you need only match five.

There are two bonus numbers on all current Big 50 ticket bonus stubs, so the lottery uses only two of the four numbers on Reserved Tickets during this bonus offering. When the bonus goes to four six digit numbers, all four numbers on Reserved Tickets will be in effect again.

Here's how Reserved Ticket holders can tell if they won the $2500 worth of grub: On each Big 50 Reserved Ticket confirmation card are four, six-digit bonus numbers. Every week a five-digit bonus number is drawn. If the number drawn matches the first five digits of either of the upper two, six-digit bonus numbers, the Reserved Ticket holder wins the groceries.

In the unlikely event that the first five digits of the two upper bonus numbers are identical, then the first five digits of the bonus number on the lower left will be used. Reserved Ticket holders, should they win, automatically receive their prizes. Therefore, if you didn't understand any of the above, don't worry about it.
