Al Brooks, another former coach, remembered how Bruce was an all-around athlete at DHS. He played football and basketball as well as baseball. "He had a tremendous desire to be good, do well, and improve himself," said Mr. Brooks, who gave the example of Bruce's overcoming knee and arm injuries to become a star player.

movie about the Chicago Cubs was shown.

A question and answer period followed. Bruce advised a Little Leaguer not to throw forkballs, but to concentrate on fastballs and strikes, and learn curve balls later.

In response to a question about his manager, he noted that the man is color-blind, and dresses accordingly. His injuries were not the fault of the manager pushing him to pitch, he said. His own enthusiasm caused the injuries.

Bruce has lots of confidence in his own ability, he said, but has remained modest and is still concerned for others. Bruce interrupted an interview on national TV once to wish his father a happy birthday.

Barry Etsell spoke about relief pitchers through history, ending with Bruce Sutter.

Next, Bruce took the mike. He also told some jokes, and said that the Donegal teams were run democratically, which helped prepare him for life in the major leagues, whose players come from all walks of life. After his talk, a
